Chamber Urges U.S. to Abandon Housing Works

Commerce Group Says Division's Activities Are Not Needed.

Agencies Push Plan To Spur Building

Administration In Step to Drop Construction, Aid on Finance.

By Felix Bruner.

Recommendation that the activities of the housing division of the Public Works Administration be discontinued was made by the directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday, as Government housing agencies continued their discussion of plans to encourage private industry in construction of low-rental houses.

President Roosevelt indicated plans for reorganization of Government housing activities still were in the study stage. In other quarters it was said plans were being drawn to encourage private capital to build at least 200,000 homes next year.

Indications yesterday were that the Administration is planning to take these steps:

1. Discontinuance of actual construction and renting of houses by the Government.

2. Substitution of a plan under which local housing authorities would erect and operate dwellings financed partly by local funds and partly by Federal loans and grants.

3. Reorganization of Government housing agencies with the view of giving more assistance in private construction of homes, especially for families with incomes of $1,500 to $3,000 a year.

Committee Active.

The entire housing program is under consideration by a committee which includes representatives of the Federal Housing Administration, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the housing division of the Public Works Administration, and other agencies directly concerned with housing.

Much stress is being put on the necessity for encouragement of private enterprise. In this connection no Federal subsidy is contemplated. The suggestion has been made that the RFC give financial assistance to large mortgage associations which would be in a position to issue securities against mortgages. The rules of the FHA also would be changed to encourage construction of low-priced houses. It is possible that the FHA may be permitted to insure mortgages on houses costing $4,500 or under up to 90 per cent of their appraised value instead of 80 per cent.

The suggestion for Government loans and grants to municipal or other public housing authorities is entirely separate from the plan for encouragement of private building. The latter plan is expected to be included in a bill to be introduced by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York.

May Ask Billion.

The Wagner bill would put the housing on a permanent rather than a relief basis, with part of its money—that which would be loaned to local agencies—in the form of a revolving fund. Such an arrangement, however, would make only a small dent in the demand for housing.

In any case, it appeared evident that the Government will build no more housing itself. Projects already under way would be carried to completion. It has been reported that Wagner would ask for a fund of as much as $1,000,000,000, but it was expected that whatever the amount it would be spread over a comparatively long period of years. No such huge Government financing is con-

Greek 'Strong Man' Dies

GEN. GEORGE KONDYLIS.

Kondylis Dies; Revolt Threat In Greece Ends

By the Associated Press.

Athens, Jan. 31.—Death cut short today Gen. George Kondylis' effort to prevent formation of a new government under the banner of his political enemies.

The former "strong man" died of a heart attack, complicated by asthma, from which he had long suffered. He was 65.

King George II, ruler of the restored Greek monarchy, led his nation in mourning the former regent who played a leading part in the monarch's recall and then split with him on political issues.

Kondylis is to be extended full military honors at his funeral Sunday in recognition of his record of having fought in more than 50 engagements since he entered the army 30 years ago as a private.

The militant royalist, under whose direction the bloodless coup of last October ended the republican government, had been active politically until the general elections last Sunday. Then he saw his party go down to defeat before the strong Venizelist group, who gained control of a majority of the parliamentary seats.

This defeat, coupled with his recent break with Jean Theotokis, once his co-leader, was advanced by his associates as a contributing cause to his unexpected death.

Unconfirmed reports the former regent had been poisoned by his political enemies were quickly denied. Officials called out the Athens garrison to guard against eventualities as soon as the death report was circulated.

Authorities previously had viewed with apprehension the party leader's threat to use force, if necessary, to prevent the Venizelists from gaining control of the new cabinet.

Political circles expressed belief formation of the new cabinet would be easier since the former "strong man's" death.

8 Men Convicted Of Drake Swindle

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—Eight men were held responsible by a Federal Court jury tonight for the Sir Francis Drake estate promotion fraud which prosecutors charged enticed $1,350,000 from the pockets of 70,000 American investors.

On their shoulders the jury placed the onus for the gigantic scheme which promotors claimed would return $5,000 for $1 from the mythical riches of the Elizabethan sea rover.

The defendants convicted were:

Oscar M. Hartzell, of Leavenworth Penitentiary; Canfield Hartzell, of New York, his brother; A. R. Gregory, of Wenatchee, Wash.; Emil R. Rochel, of Madison, Wis.; Joseph H. Hauber, Lester E. Ohmart, Delmer C. Short, and Otto Yant, all Hartzell lieutenants in the Chicago headquarters.

Aggregate sentences for all defendants may total 87 years in jail and fines of $27,000.

20 Convicts Are Cremated In Auto Cage

Blazing Gas Envelops Locked Car; Only Two Escape.

By the Associated Press.

Scottsboro, Ala., Jan. 31.—Trapped behind the locked doors of a motorized cage, 20 Negro convicts were cremated near here today by flames from an accidentally fired gasoline container.

All but two of the load of prisoners, huddled together to keep warm in the 5-above-zero weather, perished as the conveyance was converted into a blazing pyre.

The victims were burned beyond recognition. Pending identification, their names and records were not available.

Burned so seriously they were expected to die, Paul Dawson, of Demopolis, Ala., and John Stokes, of Birmingham, survived.

Two Guards Burned.

They were rescued by H. M. Middlebrook and C. R. Wasson, white guards.

Middlebrook and Wasson were burned on the hands and face as they snatched the two prisoners from the fire and rolled them in the snow.

The guards were riding in the cab of the transfer truck and flames enveloped the machine before they could reach the locked door at the rear.

Dawson, seared from head to foot, gave an account of the tragedy, which he said resulted from the effort of a fellow prisoner to warm his hands by lighting a piece of paper.

Two containers of gasoline were in the cage, he said, a large drum and a small can.

"I looked down and saw the blaze run up the floor," Dawson said. "The other boys crowded to the front, away from the gasoline, but Stokes and I clawed at the door.

"Mr. Middlebrook stopped the truck quickly and flung open the door. Me and Stokes jumped out and they rolled us in the snow."

Victims Scream for Help.

The gasoline flamed and exploded, throwing the burning fluid over the panic-stricken prisoners and cutting off escape. Their frantic pleas for help rose above the roar of the flames.

Middlebrook said the truck had been making slow progress because of the hazardous condition of the highway.

He said its slipping and sliding along the rough road apparently caused some of the gasoline to slosh out on the floor.

"The first time we knew anything was wrong was when we heard the Negroes shrieking in terror," Middlebrook said.

"As soon as I could stop the truck, I dashed to the rear and unlocked the door and attempted to pull them out. Two near the door we could save, but both were badly burned. The rest could not be reached."

Coroner W. R. Word, after questioning the two survivors, returned a finding of "accidental death."

Officials of the State Convict Department said the prisoners were listed by their records and conduct as "bad."

Dawson is serving a three to four year sentence for grand larceny, and Stokes four to ten years for burglary.

A Rolling Prison.

The transfer truck was made into a rolling prison by placing a heavy mesh over the sides with a metal top. The floors and lower side walls were of wooden construction.

Canvas side curtains are provided for use in cold and rainy weather. They were battened down today.

The blackened remnants of the truck with the charred bodies inside was towed back to the camp this afternoon.

It was near this northeast Alabama community that the Scottsboro case had its beginning five years ago.

The latest episode in the case was the wounding of Ozie Powell, one of the nine defendants, and the knifing of a deputy sheriff, as the Negroes were being transferred from Decatur, Ala., to Birmingham last week.

Hamp Draper, chief of the convict department, and Gaston Scott, chairman of the Alabama highway commission, came here at the direction of Gov. Bibb Graves to conduct an inquiry into the fire deaths.

Drugs Hidden in Dolls.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31 (AP).—The hollowed legs and arms of Chinese dolls were used to hide thousands of dollars' worth of narcotics at a rooming house here, Chris Hansen, United States Narcotic Bureau head, said today after a raid. Two Chinese were arrested.

Widow of Huey Long Appointed to Senate

Mother of Three to Serve at Least Until Election in April; Two Women Hold Places First Time in History.

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 31.—The widow of Senator Huey P. Long was appointed to fill out his unexpired term in the United States Senate today, placing two women in the upper branch of Congress for the first time in history.

In a surprise move, Gov. James A. Noe announced the selection late today following a trip to New Orleans, where he conferred with State administration leaders.

With the action, Mrs. Rose McConnell Long will take her place in the Senate along with Mrs. Hattie Caraway, whom the late Senator Long helped elect.

Thus both these women, the only ones ever to serve in the Senate except for the one-day term of Mrs. Rebecca Lattimer Felton, of Georgia, in 1922, owe their seats to Long.

Mrs. Long, a quiet and amiable mother of three children, who has lived a life apart from her late husband's fierce political battles, commented briefly, "That's fine! That's very fine!" when told of the appointment.

As Senator Long's successor, Mrs. Long will carry with her to Washington legal possession of her husband's "share our wealth" program, title to which recently was vested in her with its details.

It was not announced when Mrs. Long would take her seat in the Senate, but it was believed she could do so before the general election, April 21.

Gov. O. K. Allen, Long's chief political ally, was elected for the unexpired term in the recent Louisiana Democratic primary. His death of cerebral hemorrhage last Tuesday again vacated the seat, however.

"This is the proudest day of my life," Gov. Noe said in announcing the appointment, "for it has given me the opportunity to play a part in paying a tribute to the greatest American of our time, and the best friend I ever had."

Senator Long was shot and fatally wounded in the statehouse here last September 8. His term in the Sen-

Frozen Credits Released by Pact That Increases Foreign Trade.

By the Associated Press.

A plan for expanding foreign trade by releasing some $17,000,000 of American credits now "frozen" in Brazil for lack of foreign exchange was shaped yesterday at a White House conference.

The situation which long has troubled commercial relations with Brazil was gone over by President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

As a result, the Federal Export-Import Bank was expected in official quarters to announce within a few days a plan for releasing the credits and applying them mostly to sales of American products in other countries through the trade ramification by which such credits can be transferred from nation to nation.

Under the plan, the Bank of Brazil, with the Brazilian government's approval, is pledged to pay all American claims of less than $25,000 in cash and has earmarked $2,250,000 for that purpose.

American creditors for amounts exceeding $25,000 would be issued

Saito Declares Japan Is Free Of Autocracy

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 31.—Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito tonight reiterated Japan's determination to establish herself as the stabilizing factor in Eastern Asia and denied allegations that his country is one of those nations "dominated by autocracy" against which President Roosevelt warned Americans in his message to Congress on January 3.

Addressing the annual dinner of the Japan Society, the Ambassador, without mentioning the President's address, said:

"Today, in no part of the world, is there any selfish and misguided despot bent upon conquest for conquest's sake * * * Not in Russia, Italy, Germany, France, Britain, the United States or Japan."

It is true, Saito admitted, that "in several countries there are men who are called dictators leading their nations to what they hope will be relief * * * but * * * they are natural products of hard ecological circumstances and their pa-

Potomac Ice-Bound First Time In 18 Years; Warmer Forecast

Evidence of the persistent severity of the cold wave in Washington was given last night when for the first time since 1918 sailing of the Norfolk steamship was delayed because of ice conditions in the Potomac.

The Northland, scheduled to sail last night, lay at her dock because of ice jams in the river. Near Indian Head, Md., harbor police said ice was piled up as much as 12 feet thick.

Officials of the Norfolk and Washington Steamship Line said the Northland probably would sail at 7 a. m. today. The District of Columbia, bound here from Norfolk, will arrive about noon, several hours late, because it has been delayed by ice, officials said.

Before dawn today the temperature will retreat down the scale to 6 degrees above, the forecaster said. However, he predicted that later in the day it would be fair and somewhat warmer and that more snow would fall tomorrow.

Yesterday's high mark was 19 at 4 p. m., with a brisk wind whipping over the ice-locked Potomac and Anacostia rivers. The minimum was 10 degrees at 8 a. m.

A fresh drop in the temperature was in store for other parts of the country today, and most everywhere meteorologists gave little hope of a rest from the cold wave, which is two weeks old, and reminds them of the war-time winter of 1917-1918.

The Associated Press reported New England shivering, with temperatures ranging as low as 20 degrees below zero. The mercury hovered near zero in Chicago, St. Louis and Minneapolis. Today will be slightly colder in New York, Manhattan officials said.

From the Old Dominion on the south came a dispatch that the City of Richmond had asked the Coast Guard to engage in ice-breaking activities on the James River, as a bright sun gave some relief from cold throughout Virginia.

The jammed floes pushed the James' level up to a foot and a half in Richmond harbor.

The sting and bite of the cold wave has done heavy damage to fruit crops—particularly peaches—in Ohio, the Associated Press asserted last night.

Eastman Acts To Merge Rail Depots, Yards

Carriers to Be Saved Millions by Huge Consolidations.

Eleven Cities Affected by Initial Order; Called 'First Step.'

By the United Press.

The New Deal last night prepared the first drastic orders in a national railroad consolidation program designed to simplify the country's entire transportation system and save the carriers hundreds of millions of dollars.

Announcing that he was tired of urging the railways to take the initiative, only to be ignored, Federal Transportation Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman said he would order terminal consolidations within a few weeks in 11 cities. The orders will mean abandonment of numerous passenger stations, freight yards and repair shops.

Thereafter, he indicated, will come an avalanche of orders for other similar consolidations and perhaps unification of whole railroads if his plan reaches full fruition.

Saving of 50 Millions.

Eastman said he had surveyed 5,000 separate terminals, where consolidations could be made profitably, with an ultimate saving to the railroads of $50,000,000.

"But these are only part of the program," he said. "It is believed that the opportunities for savings, and, even more important, for traffic gains from other improvements which can be made, run into larger figures. The groundwork for these improvements has been laid and the time has come to get on with them."

His plan, he said, is not to consolidate the roads into huge units or to stifle competition, but to enable the competing companies "to co-operate to mutual advantage where their interests are common."

He warned that if private enterprise "proves unable to do what the public interest requires," public ownership of the carriers "is inevitable." He expressed the hope simultaneously that Federal operation of the railroads would not be necessary.

Eleven Terminals Affected.

His first 11 orders will affect terminals at Worcester, Mass.; Meehanicville, N. Y.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Meridian, Miss.; Freeport, Ill.; Des Moines, Iowa; Council Bluffs, Iowa; Beaumont, Tex.; Ogden, Utah, and Montgomery, Ala.

The orders in general will force all railways entering each of these cities to abandon competing passenger stations, if any, make use of common freight yards if their capacity is large enough, and cease operation of duplicating repair shops.

Eastman said he had chosen these 11 projects because they were the simplest and easiest to put into being. He stressed the fact that all of them had been approved in theory by chieftains of the railroads involved, whom he charged with unreasonable failure to act.

When these first consolidations are put into effect, Eastman indicated he would order the tremendously complicated ones for which plans have been drawn up in such cities as New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City.

"After this first step, he said the other steps of increasing magnitude, working up gradually from small to larger projects, but always with a willingness to stand aside if the railroads are able to proceed on their own momentum."

He said that all of the first consolidations would be made in accordance with the present rail law, which provides that no railroad

Pope Is Ill of Cold; Cancels Audiences

Vatican City (Saturday), Feb. 1 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XI has had a cold since Thursday morning and canceled all public audiences, it was learned today. He is 78 years old.

His illness is not serious, it was said, and he is not confined to bed, despite persistent reports to the contrary.

The Pope received a few callers in his private apartments, but deputized Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, papal secretary of state, to represent him at the unveiling of the statue of Saint Giovanni Bosco at St. Peters Friday in order not to expose himself to drafts. His Holiness was expected to remain in his apartments today, but may attend the Candlemass ceremony in the Sistine Chapel Sunday.

Inflationists Seek Bonus and Farm Mortgage Tie-up

Starts Linking Rails

CO-ORDINATOR EASTMAN.

By Robert C. Albright.

A race between the Administration's indefinite tax program and a new alliance of Congressional inflationists was seriously projected yesterday, as militant factions in both groups moved swiftly to plug the $3,000,000,000 gap torn in the President's budget by bonus and farm legislation.

Faced with a $35,000,000,000 public debt in the next fiscal year, New Deal fiscal agents, urged on by the President, were plumbing every revenue source for taxes variously estimated between $800,000,000 and $800,000,000.

Taking advantages of this opportune situation, Congressional expansionists made the first step toward an alignment of inflationary bonus members with the House bloc now supporting the $3,000,000,0000 Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill.

Chamber's Inflation Warning.

These developments dovetailed with a Chamber of Commerce committee report warning that extension of the Government's fiscal policies might result in "uncontrolled inflation."

The report, filed with the chamber's board of directors by Fred H. Clausen, of Horicon, Wis., urged businessmen and their organizations to promote "an intelligent public understanding of the menace inherent in unbalanced budgets and excessive taxation."

"An alert public sentiment alone can successfully resist such taxation and bring expenditures into line with revenues," Clausen said.

Other developments in the increasingly complex bonus-farm-fiscal situation were:

The Senate Appropriations Committee reported the deficiency and independent offices appropriations bills, instructing James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to offer the $2,237,000,000 supplemental bonus estimate to one of the bills on the Senate floor.

Updeterred by this move, which appeared likely to block presentation of an inflationary bonus amendment in the House, the bonus steering committee of Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, decided on an alignment with the House farm bloc, in an effort to finance both farm and bonus programs with a new "greenback" issue.

Patman Calls Gold Parley.

Patman called another meeting this morning of "all members of the House of Representatives who are interested in using the idle gold and silver in the Treasury as a basis for the issuance of new currency to be used to pay the veterans the money they will collect on their adjusted service certificates or the bonds they will receive in exchange therefor, instead of resorting to taxation."

The President served definite notice that a new tax program is being formulated. In other high official quarters, it was said the new revenue may seek to raise as much as $600,000,000 to finance the farm program, and another $230,000,000 to begin amortization of the huge bonus debt.

Tax experts said four avenues of approach to the revenue question are being considered. The first, contemplating reduction of income exemptions and raising of the normal 4 per cent rate, could raise a maximum of $1,000,000,000. The second, providing for processing taxes somewhat similar to old AAA levies, would raise up to $600,000,000. The third—a non-pyramiding 3 per cent manufacturers excise tax, could raise a $1,000,000,000 maximum. And the fourth, increased taxes on $10,000 to $100,000 incomes, could raise very little.

Repeal of Acts Seen.

Administrative acquiescence in repeal of existing Bankhead cotton act ginning taxes, Kerr-Smith law tobacco taxes and Warren act potato taxes, is said to have been given yesterday, and will be communicated to the Capitol in a few days. While not specifically invalidated by the Supreme Court's AAA decision, it is believed they

Hopkins Warns WPA Shirkers Face Discharge

Lowered Efficiency Laid to Laxity of Small Group of Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopinks, Works Progress Administrator, yesterday warned shirkers on work-relief projects that they face penalties of suspension or permanent discharge.

The same penalties, he said, will be applied to foremen and supervisors who tolerate shirking. A small proportion of those employed, he charged, have been hampering the "efficient operation" of the projects.

"Habitual and intentional shirking will not be tolerated," he added, asserting that the warning was not aimed at a general condition, but at a small proportion of the workers, who seem to feel that they will be retained regardless of their efforts.

"It is the policy of the Works Progress Administration," he said, "that projects shall be operated with the maximum degree of efficiency that is compatible with carrying out the primary purpose of the works program, which is to transfer people from the relief rolls to useful work. In the great majority of cases, workers to whom employment has been given have shown that they desire to render conscientious service.

"Reports have been received, however, that in certain instances a small proportion of workers have detracted from the efficiency of operation of projects by their unwillingness to deliver a fair day's work, coupled with a belief that their employment would be continued regardless of their attitude.

"Workers employed on Works Progress Administration projects are expected to render as conscientious service to that administration as they would to a regular Government department, or a private employer. Habitual and intentional shirking will not be tolerated.

"In cases of demonstrated shirking or misconduct, employes may be suspended without pay for periods not exceeding one month or may be discharged. Since foremen and supervisors are responsible that conscientious service is rendered by all employes under their jurisdiction, those who habitually permit shirking by workers who are under their direction may be similarly suspended or discharged.

"Employes discharged for these reasons will not again be employed by the Works Progress Administration."

Liquor Shop Owner Robbed, Wounded

Wounds which may prove fatal were suffered last night by Sergius B. Carman, 46, when he resisted a holdup by three unidentified colored men at his liquor store, 1303 Seventh street northwest.

Carman was unconscious when found on the floor by neighbors. He was cut and beaten about the head. His wounds include a broken jaw. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

The store's cash register was rifled.

Police, Quitting Target Range, Kill 2 Bank Robbers, Seize One

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.—Two bank robbery suspects were killed and another was arrested today after they held up a bank, one block from the sheriff's department pistol range in suburban El Monte.

Eighteen of the best pistol marksmen of the sheriff's office answered when a telephone operator relayed the bank's call to the target range.

The deputies, their pistols warm from firing, climbed into automobiles and were ready for action when they halted their cars a block away.

At that moment, the three robbers emerged from the bank.

Two, identified later by Officer E. E. Powell as Clarence Smith, Glendale, and E. C. Yates, Beverly Hills, fell dead, riddled by bullets. Frank F. Smith, brother of the dead man, was seized as he attempted to flee.

More than a score of the Southern County Bank's employes and customers were inside when the deputies surrounded the building.

As the robbers emerged, they fired on the officers with sub-machine guns. The deputies returned the fire while bank employes, patrons and bystanders fled to cover.

Forcing employes and depositors to gather in one corner under the menace of their guns, the two had

Missing Nurse Found on Ice Of Creek; Faces Loss of Feet

Facing the possible loss of both feet and also prospects of contracting pneumonia, Miss Jean C. Baxter, 640 A street southeast, was in undetermined condition yesterday at Georgetown University Hospital after being found helpless on the ice of Rock Creek about 200 feet below P Street Bridge.

According to police, Miss Baxter, who is 61, was reported missing from her home late Thursday by her housekeeper, Miss Mary Ireland. She was found at 7 a. m. yesterday when a pedestrian, crossing P Street Bridge, saw a woman sitting on the ice in the ravine below.

He notified Seventh Precinct police. Miss Baxter was removed to Georgetown Hospital by Private John J. Leu. Dr. C. M. Musso, of the hospital staff, said both feet were so badly frozen they may have to be amputated. She also is in danger of pneumonia, he declared.

No statement as to how she made her way across the city to Rock Creek was forthcoming from the hospital. Miss Ireland told police Miss Baxter slipped out of the house while she was preparing dinner.

Neighbors declared Miss Baxter is a graduate nurse and formerly served in the Philadelphia and Washington Naval Hospitals. A check of personnel records in the Nurses Corps of both the Army and Navy revealed, however, that no Jean C. Baxter has been enrolled in either branch of the service in the last 25 years.

Liberty League To Widen Fight On 'New Deal'

By the Associated Press.

Determination to campaign relentlessly against the New Deal, regardless of party ties, was evidenced anew last night by the bi-partisan leadership of the American Liberty League.

Saying its membership approaches 75,000, Jouett Shouse, league president, reported it ready for broad expansion of its activities "if such expansion seems wise." He asserted attempts by the President to "damn" the organization were "striking evidence of the need" for the league's "work."

The words were widely construed at the Capitol in the light of Alfred E. Smith's notice at the organization's dinner last Saturday that anti-Roosevelt Democrats would probably "take a walk" if the June convention upholds the Administration.

Activities Renewed.

Speculation recurred as to whether he and other party leaders joined in the league might be planning an independent ticket in pivotal States or possibly to support a Republican. The general inclination was not to expect a final answer until both party platforms are known.

The New York Herald Tribune reported John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, has sent letters to 150,000 men and women urging them to rally to the standard of the American Liberty League and "root out the vicious radical element that threatens the destruction of our Government."

Raskob did not make his appeal as a former leader of the Democratic Party, the newspaper said.

The letter stated there was a radical minority in both major parties that has become so strongly entrenched in public positions of power and authority as to threaten the destructions of the principles upon which the Government was founded.

The Shouse report, indorsed unanimously by the league's executive committee and advisory council when presented last week, reviewed activities since August, 1934, and said:

"Fortunately now the people have awakened. Fortunately a large part of them have begun to understand the insidious and dangerous thing that was being accomplished under the guise of relief and recovery. The sanity of America is beginning once more to control."

It climaxed another politically eventful day. Developments included:

Senator Borah, of Idaho, decided not to contest in Pennsylvania for delegates to the Republican convention. Expense was given as the reason.

Subsidy Bill Endorsed.

Gov. Landon of Kansas proceeded with "making his record" on farm relief. After conferring with Representative Hope, of Kansas, here by telephone from Topeka, he endorsed the wheat, cotton, corn-hog, tobacco subsidy bill introduced by Hope Thursday as one that would not require "an extensive bureaucracy to administer."

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, said President Roosevelt has given his approval to the proposed Senate investigation of Presidential and Senatorial campaign expenditures.

The President discussed the investigating resolution, introduced Thursday by Robinson, at a luncheon talk yesterday with the majority leader. Early authorization for the inquiry is expected.

Col. Frank Knox, of Illinois, also an outstanding possibility to head the G. O. P. ticket, at Dayton, Ohio, reiterated that the New Deal was out to "capture" what private business has built.

Challenge Laughed Off.

Gov. Talmadge of Georgia at Atlanta laughed off a challenge by Roosevelt campaigners there to pit his strength against the President in a Presidential preference primary. Talmadge controls the State Democratic committee which must decide whether a primary will be held.

President Roosevelt's campaign in Georgia will be considered in conferences here today, with the President a possible participant.

Representative Carl Vinson, of Milledgeville, dean of the Georgia Congressional delegation, called a delegation meeting today "for the purpose of conferring with Judge Archie Lovett and Hon. Marion Allen with reference to the Roosevelt campaign in Georgia."

Allen was selected recently as Roosevelt campaign manager by the State committee of 28 set up by the Congressional delegation. Lovett was named committee chairman.

The United Mine Workers convention here gave the President an ovation when asked by Edward F. McGardy, Assistant Secretary of Labor, whether they supported him. "Let that be the answer to the money bags of Wall Street," he shouted.

President John L. Lewis of the union spoke disparagingly of former Gov. Smith. Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, told the meeting "the powers of reaction will suffer a greater defeat in November than three years ago."

Communications Commission yesterday directed a study of the anti-New Deal speech broadcast by Talmadge Wednesday to determine whether it violated provisions of the communications law.

Chairman Anning S. Prall said the Georgian's address to the Macon convention of "Jeffersonian Democrats" was referred to counsel for an opinion on its legality after complaint had been received from "National Housewives, Inc.," of Baltimore. After the opinion is drawn, it will be considered by the broadcast division and possibly by the full commission.

The complaint, signed by Aimee Weber, president of the organization criticized "abusive language" in broadcast political speeches and denounced "one-sided, vituperative harangues."

Harry Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, announced last night the resignation of Frank H. Peterman as Louisiana WPA administrator, effective March 1. James H. Crutcher, assistant administrator in Louisiana, was named acting administrator.

Politics and People

Prohibition Is No Longer Bible Belt Issue; Open Drinking Seen in Dry Strongholds.

By Franklyn Waltman

MOST people will agree that prohibition is no longer a political issue in this country, but few seem to realize how completely it has been eliminated from politics, even in local contests. Indeed, drinking hard liquor, except in excess, is not even a moral question any longer in many parts of the Bible belt.

When it is remembered that during the 1920's repeal of national prohibition was regarded as the most vital issue in American politics, when it is remembered that the passions of men and women became more intense over this issue than any other, it is astounding and amazing to consider the change that has taken place in this country in the last two years.

Georgia always was regarded as legally the driest spot in the country, even though it leads all States in the number and capacity of stills confiscated. From Georgia to the halls of Congress came William David Upshaw, a plumed knight in the cause of prohibition and morality—the drys called him.

Even when all the country was turning its back on national prohibition, Georgia held steadfast to the ancient cause. Virginia and Texas might vote to permit the sale of hard liquor, but not Georgia. Last May repeal of the State's bone-dry prohibition law lost by the small margin of several hundred votes, out of 164,000 ballots cast.

Surely if the prohibitionists ever were to stage a comeback it would naturally seem that Georgia should be the starting place. At least that seemed so last May, after the referendum. But in the meanwhile, despite the failure of the repeal referendum, Georgia seems headed for the devil and hard drink—and "cawn" liquor out of a fruit jar is not meant, either.

* * * *

Knowing that Georgia's Statewide law against hard liquor remains on the statute books, some of the Northern observers at the Macon "grass roots" convention of Jeffersonian Democrats came prepared. Such forethought, however, was as unnecessary as carrying Scotch and rye to New York or Baltimore.

Behold their amazement when, upon entering the basement room of their hotel, termed a tavern, for the purpose of getting a legal glass of beer they found friends sitting at tables sipping Scotch soda in an atmosphere as gay and sporty as any New York night club.

There at one end stood a large mahogany bar. Only bottles and cans of beer, and bottles of light wines, were stacked behind the bar. But the more potent beverages flowed like water—and some of the prices were cheaper than those in Washington.

Apparently there were no secret pass words or signs—nor any rules. The door was open and anyone could come in. You could stand at the bar and drink, which you cannot do in Washington, or you could sit at tables and tell the colored boy what you wanted—Scotch, rye, bourbon, brandy, Martinis or Manhattans—and it appeared a minute later.

Later in the evening the boys and girls of Macon came in and an orchestra "whooped it up." Women smoked. The small dance floor was jammed. Instead of being in the heart of Georgia it seemed more like Broadway. Asked the closing hour, a waiter replied:

"We usually closes up at 1 o'clock, but when we has a party we don't close up at all."

But they did. When the orchestra stopped playing and the guests became noisy, dividing into small groups and starting to sing, the sliding doors hiding the bar from the dance room were pulled shut, and the lights flashed as a warning to go home.

* * * *

The law? No one seemed to mind it, or even remember it. During the evening Gov. Eugene Talmadge, with a group of lieutenants, came to the "tavern" for dinner. The orchestra leader introduced him and he waved his hand. The Governor did not drink, but liquor was being served all around him. Perhaps he did not see it.

The bartender, when asked about the law, explained that Macon always has been liberal, that the people in this small city last May voted overwhelmingly for repeal. The preachers are said to respect public sentiment, and do not agitate against the sale of liquor under such respectable auspices.

One resident explained that it was really local option. He called it the ideal solution of the prohibition problem. The South was strong for prohibition only because of the damage liquor does among Negroes and poor whites, he said. These classes cannot come up to the hotel to get it—but the more "temperate" folks can have what they want.

* * * *

Savannah was even more open about the selling of liquor, a Georgian explained. If you knew where to go, you could get what you wanted in Atlanta, he said, but the dry sentiment was greater there. A Texan who motored from his home to the Macon meeting said he had no trouble whatever in getting good liquor in any town above 10,000 population on the way up. It was more or less like that all over the South, he said.

* * * *

And just to think that about three years ago Atlantans were so indignant because their mayor, James L. Key, sipped champagne in Paris and said "prohibition is a failure" that an election was ordered for his recall—but it failed.

Halt in Housing Is Urged

The Chamber of Commerce report, prepared by a committee headed by S. F. Clabaugh, president of the Protective Life Insurance Co. of Birmingham, Ala., estimated the need for new urban housing totals 400,000 units per year during the next 10 years.

"A marked increase in residential construction has already occurred," the committee reported. "This will continue. The recovery presents important opportunities to the building industry to provide the home purchaser or renter with a better product at a lower price."

The committee saw in the revival of home construction an important indication of the recovery which is taking place in the durable goods industry. Further gains would result, the committee found, by agreement upon a positive and constructive housing policy for the country.

"Mortgage financing facilities in the home field are ample and mortgage funds are becoming increasingly available," the committee reported.

"A forced stimulation of building will not achieve the ends which are sought. It is more likely to result in wastes and increased costs. The building industry is expanding its organization under the stimulus of new activity and can be counted upon to undertake the work of making up the deficit in housing facilities. Progress which is being made to this end will continue unless broken down by the overload of forced building."

Would Curb Costs.

The committee found that interest rates have been reduced and that the trend toward the long-time amortized mortgage solves one of the problems of home ownership. The committee pointed out that unnecessary and speculative costs in financing the purchase or construction of homes must be avoided.

The committee further urged reduction in the cost of houses to attract families with incomes of $1,500 to $2,500.

"By improving the housing of the middle group of families it will automatically, through a sifting up process, improve the housing conditions of the lower income group; and of the poorest families by rent subsidy."

Favors "Relief" Method.

It also was recommended that technical and economic and market research with reference to housing should be encouraged. The committee said this should be undertaken by both private and public agencies. It recommended that the research activities of various housing units of the Government be combined.

The committee held rehabilitation of the older and neglected areas in cities is a local city planning problem.

The committee particularly emphasized that construction of low-cost housing should be by private enterprise.

"Construction, ownership and operation of housing facilities for the lowest income group, unable to pay an economic rent, should be by private enterprise," it declared. "Assistance to such families should be in the form of rental subsidy, that is, financial aid by local relief agencies to individual families, enabling them to provide shelter, just as financial aid is given to buy food and clothing. The conception of Government as landlord and its citizens as tenant is inconsistent with American tradition, policy and ideal."

Going directly into Government housing activities, the committee found that the emergency is over and recommended termination of emergency activities. It recommended particularly that Congress should cancel the unused authorization to issue bonds for refinancing of mortgages. Such action, it said, would encourage private investment.

The committee further recommended continued support of the Home Loan Bank system and further trial of the experiment of mortgage insurance by the Federal Housing Administration. It opposed, however, absorption by the Government of any part of the insurance premiums charged by the Federal Housing Administration.

In advocating ending of Government housing by the PWA, the committee also included activities of the Resettlement Administration, declaring that "even greater objections lie against it."

Textiles Plan to Use Old NRA Standards

By the Associated Press.

Dr. C. T. Murchison, president of of the Cotton Textile Institute, told a House sub-committee yesterday he expected to announce within a few days a voluntary agreement by the industry to abide by the old NRA standards.

Murchison said the agreement, which he said he was confident would be successful, would provide for a 40-hour week, a minimum wage of 30 cents an hour for the South ad 32½ cents in the North, elimination of child labor, and a restriction of machine operation to a two-shift, 80-hour week.

Supreme Court Gets Business Self-Rule Plea

By the Associated Press.

A large degree of self-regulation of industry to eliminate "destructive practices" was advocated in a brief filed with the Supreme Court yesterday by the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc., and other organizations.

It was presented preparatory to arguments Monday on an appeal by the Sugar Institute, of New York, an organization of sugar refiners, asking reversal of a lower court decision that most of its activities at self-regulation violated the Sherman anti-trust act.

The Sugar Institute described the case as "the most elaborate legal test of the activities of a trade association ever undertaken by the Government."

As 'Friend of Court.'

Filing its brief as a "friend of the court," the Cotton Textile Institute and its associates—the Window Glass Manufacturers Association, the National Lumber Manufacturers Association and the Consumers' Goods Industries Committe—said:

"When competition is functioning effectively in its fundamentals, measures dealing with destructive or wasteful practices are not illegal merely because of the presence of a motive and effect to stabilize conditions in the industry and bring about an improvement in returns."

Calling for "a voluntary co-operative effort among the competitors in an industry to correct, or at least to mitigate, manifest evils," the brief continued:

"We have just experienced an attempt to deal in a wholesale way with competitive practices.

"The NRA was an attempt to formulate laws as to the conduct of competitive business to a degree that brought Government and its police power into the direct control of the detailed conduct of practically every industrial enterprise.

"It is not too much to say," the brief added, "that the development of methods of securing reasonable stability and the elimination of destructive practices—concurrently with the continuance of the fundamentals of competition—must be effectively continued if the competitive system in its present form is to survive.

"We believe that this can be accomplished by the voluntary action of industry within the anti-trust laws by the application of principles already enunciated by the court."

worker can lose his job through any such consolidation.

He said he regarded this provision as being unsatisfactory, not only to the railroads, but to their workers. Because of it, he said the full economies inherent in the consolidations will not become apparent at once.

Keen Enterprise at Hand.

"From now on, the hope for thriving and growing railroads lies in the keen enterprise which can produce more convenient, more frequent, more expeditious, more flexible, more attractive, and more economical passenger and freight service at lower rates and charges," he continued.

"The ultimate aim (of the coordinator) is not to reduce employment, but to increase and stabilize it. Obstruction of the program will in the end not help, but harm, railroad labor."

Eastman's office automatically expires June 16. Unless Congress extends it, as recommended by him in his recent annual report, his consolidation plans presumably would be abandoned. It generally was understood, however, that the Administration favors extension of the co-ordination law and that Congress probably will acquiesce.

Truck Cargo Burns.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 31.—Merchandise valued at nearly $1,000 was destroyed early today by fire which started in a van at Middletown, Va. The cargo was the property of Leroy Holsinger, of New Market, Va. The driver had parked the truck when the flames were discovered. The fire was extinguished before serious damage was done to the vehicle.

Lewis Pledges Help of Miners In Coal Crisis

Asserts They May Work More Than 35 Hours Weekly in Emergency.

By the Associated Press

John L. Lewis, president, told the United Mine Workers' convention yesterday that miners will be allowed to work more than 35 hours a week wherever threatened coal shortages "cannot be remedied otherwise."

"In any community where the need for more coal exists, it is the easiest thing in the world for operators to divert coal billed for industrial use," Lewis said.

"The United Mine Workers don't intend to let coal shortages that could be remedied otherwise to be used as a subterfuge for breaking wage and hour contracts.

"In such cases where it is determined that there is actually need that cannot be remedied otherwise, the miners will be given permission to work more than 35 hours a week."

Lewis said Gov. Clyde Herring of Iowa was "ill advised" and "certainly assumed a lot of responsibility" in suggesting that Iowa miners be allowed to work eight hours a day to meet a coal shortage.

In and around the City of Des Moines, Lewis said, the miners now were not working full time in all the mines.

He concluded by saying that "if the operators desire to increase production, there are thousands of idle miners."

Herring's appeal to President Roosevelt to intervene in seeking a greater output of coal in the Midwest area was referred yesterday to Secretary Perkins.

Knox Charges Plot Against Business

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher mentioned as a Republican candidate for President, declared tonight the Administration is investigating private enterprise "to discredit, if possible, private business and private businessmen in the eyes of the American people."

He spoke at the annual McKinley Day dinner of the Montgomery County Republican committee, renewing his recent assertion "businessmen have got to get into politics—or get out of business."

It was his third address in Ohio in recent weeks. He also is scheduled to speak in Cincinnati February 6.

Mrs. Long

ate would have expired next January.

The appointment created mild surprise in political circles, although the possibility that Mrs. Long might be appointed to serve out her husband's term as a result of Allen's death had been mentioned.

Ellender Slated for Job.

Many in official circles had thought that Allen J. Ellender, nominated for the regular term, would get the appointment. Nomination in the Democratic primary in this State is tantamount to election.

The appointment brought words of welcome from Mrs. Caraway in Washington and from Senator Overton of Louisiana.

"I think it a very lovely gesture upon the part of the friends of Senator Long," the woman Senator from Arkansas commented. "From what I have heard of Mrs. Long she is a very fine woman. It will be very nice to have a woman's company in the Senate."

Senator Overton said: "I think it is a very beautiful tribute to the memory of Senator Long. I shall be glad to welcome her and cooperate with her in the work of the United States Senate."

Job Lasts Until April.

The appointment covers the interim between the present and the general election in April, when the State Democratic committee's selection for fulfillment of the rest of the unexpired turn would be effective.

After he announced the appointment, Gov. Noe said, "under the conditions that exist at this moment," he did not think a primary necessary. Members of the Democratic State central committee, he said, had assured him Mrs. Long would be affirmed as the nominee at a meeting next Wednesday.

Senator Long was a 19-year-old salesman for a Kansas City manufacturing concern when he met Rose McConnell, of Shreveport, La. She won a cake-baking contest that he sponsored to promote sale of a lard compound.

They were married at Memphis Tenn., where he was stationed.

For years, Mrs. Long worked and struggled with her husband as a salesman, lived with him in a small apartment in New Orleans when he finished a three-year law course in less than a year and was his aid in his early career as a lawyer and politician.

In later years, however, Mrs. Long had not associated herself closely with her husband's political affairs, devoting her life to caring for her children.

Two Sons and Daughter.

They are Rose and Russell, students at Louisiana State University, and Palmer Reid Long, a high school student at New Orleans.

Although Mrs. Long remained in the background during her husband's later political career, and seldom was in the news, she met with administration leaders to listento returns from the last Louisiana Democratic primary in which followers of her husband won an overwhelming victory.

Long often took delight in telling how Mrs. Long, before they were married, saved him from going to jail.

He said during a vacation in Shreveport he took his future bride to an opera. Later, he said, an attempt was made to arrest him in connection with a shooting but, through ticket stubs, he was able to locate persons seated near him at the opera and prove he was there at the time.

Mrs. Long is 42 years old.

Mrs. Rose McConnell Long, appointed to succeed her husband, the late Senator Huey P. Long, will be the third woman to sit in the United States Senate.

When Mrs. Long takes the oath of office, the Senate for the first time will have two women members sitting simultaneously. The other is Mrs. Hattie Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas, close political friend of Long. Her only speech in the Senate thus far was a tribute to the memory of Long.

Like Mrs. Long, Mrs. Caraway was appointed to the Senate upon the death of her husband. She was later elected, largely through the activities of Long, who campaigned the State in her behalf.

The first woman Senator was Mrs. Rebecca Lattimer Felton, who was a member of the Senate for exactly 22 hours. Mrs. Felton was appointed on October 3, 1922, by Gov. Hardwick, of Georgia, to fill a vacancy created by the death of Senator Thomas E. Watson.

Mrs. Felton took the oath of office on November 21, 1922, at a special session. She was 87 years old at the time. Her appearance in the Senate was greeted with loud acclaim by advocates of women's rights. From her Senate seat she made a speech on the place of women in politics.

Wilentz Insists On Hauptmann As Lone Killer

Schwarzkopf Is Convinced of Guilt, but Promises Renewed Search.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 31.—Attorney General David T. Wilentz reiterated today his conviction that Bruno Richard Hauptmann alone kidnaped and killed the Lindbergh baby.

In spite of this belief, however, and his own personal opinion that Hauptmann alone was involved, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey State police, promised Gov. Harold G. Hoffman to comply with his orders to reopen the investigation of the crime.

Gov. Hoffman said tonight that Col. Schwarzkopf had requested him to turn over any evidence in his possession showing that accomplices were involved. The Governor said he had not yet done so, but would give the police "things that come to my attention."

May Ask Outside Aid.

He said the State police could, if necessary, ask police agencies which aided in the initial investigation, including the Department of Justice, to aid in the present one.

The Governor said he did not think his letter to Schwarzkopf directing him to search for accomplices would make further reprieves necessary.

"I have no intention of granting additional reprieves," he said. "I stand by my former statement that none will be granted unless the situation warrants it."

The Governor's office announced receipt from Schwarzkopf of a letter promising to do as he was directed almost at the same time that Wilentz took public note of the Governor's orders which were issued yesterday.

Wilentz Cites Evidence.

"All the evidence, as has been repeatedly stated, every bit of evidence that has come to the attention of prosecuting officials has pointed to the guilt of Bruno Richard Hauptmann alone," Wilentz said. "And that situation has not been changed by theories, published reports or statements, no matter from what source they emanated."

Wilentz spoke after a conference with Schwarzkopf. He did not disclose what was discussed at the meeting, but he said the policeman had not asked for any advice.

By Gov. Hoffman's orders, contained in a letter to Schwarzkopf yesterday, the State police must make a weekly report in writing on the progress of their inquiry.

Wilentz said recent charges that the State had suppressed evidence at the trial were met in court when the defense applied for a writ of habeas corpus which was denied.

Condon Stories Questioned.

Hoffman, in a statement, which accompanied his letter, set forth various facts he regards as "incontrovertible proof" that Hauptmann was not alone in the kidnaping and collection of the $50,000 ransom. One of the points he raised was that Dr. John F. Condon, ransom negotiations emissary, himself expressed the opinion in a recent magazine article that Hauptmann was not alone.

Another was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's Bronx County grand jury testimony that he had seen another man near St. Raymond's Cemetery, the Bronx, when the money was paid, and had heard a second voice.

A source close to the prosecution said that answers to the questions posed by the Governor can be dug out of the State police files, but whether Schwarzkopf answered them in his letetr could not be learned.

U. S. Asks Cuban Inquiry.

Havana, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Detectives tonight admitted they had received a request from the United States to investigate the story of Arturo Gonzales Alfonso, Havana attorney, that Isidor Fisch once sought to circulate banned American money in Cuba.

Panama City, Panama, Jan. 31 (AP).—Fulton Oursler, Liberty magazine editor, tonight quoted Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh case, as telling him: "I would like to go back and face Gov. Hoffman to his teeth in the Governor's office, but my women-folks won't let me."

Oursler, who arrived today on the Grace liner Santa Barbara with his wife and daughter, saw Dr. Condon at Gorgona Beach, Panama.

Oursler quoted Dr. Condon as saying: "I know it would be tough. I know there would be men enough to overpower me, but even so I would give them a fight, even at my age.

"I would glory in it, but my women-folks won't let me."

The magazine editor said he thought Dr. Condon was in the best of health, but that his daughter, Mrs. Myra Hacker, who accompanied him here on a vacation trip, did not seem to be very well.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Puts Furniture Up for Auction

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 31.—The household furnishings of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt went on the auction block today, footnote of the domestic difficulties she has experienced along with loss of the principal custody of her daughter Gloria.

The plainly curious and potential buyers alike thronged the American Art Association Anderson Galleries auction room to examine the carved, lacquered sofas and chairs, a bedroom suite of lacquer parchment with Louis XVI molded floral details, and a double bedstead with arched head panel covered in purple velvet and bordered with guilloche carving.

Among the items is the bronze bust of the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt, done by the American sculptor Jo Davidson in 1925, the year Mrs. Vanderbilt's husband died.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Absent.

Mrs. Vanderbilt did not attend this afternoon's session of the sale, which will be continued tomorrow, but among those attending were Mrs. Walter Chrysler, sr., the Princess Von Thurn und Taxis, Mrs. E. R. Springs, Mrs. Theodore Walker and Mrs. M. Kingsbury.

A total of $3,069 was obtained for the 71 lots of Vanderbilt property sold today.

W. W. Seam, acting as agent for a private owner who, he said, is not a member of the Vanderbilt family, bought four sterling silver horse show trophy cups bearing inscriptions showing they were awarded to Reginald Vanderbilt. Their prices ranged from $100 to $140.

The bedstead, with springs and mattress, sold for $50 and the entire accompanying bedroom suite for only $30.

Auction Room Crowded.

Throughout the scale the auction room, with a seating capacity of 600, was filled, a steady stream of new arrivals taking seats as fast as they were vacated.

Mrs. Vanderbilt renounced her claims to any share of the Vanderbilt wealth recently.

After she moved to a small apartment from her Seventy-second street residence, which she indicated had become somewhat of a "white elephant," Mrs. Vanderbilt assembled her furnishings for sale.

Mrs. Vanderbilt entertains her 12-year-old daughter, whose fortune recently was set at $3,667,000, at a hotel suite during the week-ends when she has custody of the child.

Principal custody was awarded by court order to Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, the child's aunt, who has her throughout the week when Mrs Vanderbilt is occupied with the gown shop she operates in partnership with her sister, Lady Furness.

Broken Rail Blamed in Crash; Toll Is 3 Dead and 31 Injured

Rescuers Work Through Sub-Zero Night to Find Victims After Train Plunges Off Bridge in Pennsylvania Town.

By the Associated Press.

Sunbury, Pa., Jan. 31.—A preliminary investigation showed tonight that a broken rail shot the Reading Co.'s night express, the Williamsporter, off a bridge, carrying three persons to death and resulting in the injury of 31 others.

The locomotive and four coaches of the five-car train dived from the span at Clements Station last night, to plunge to the snow-clad banks of the Susquehanna River and twist across the dry bed of the old Pennsylvania Canal and the Susquehanna Trail, an important north-and-south highway.

Rescuers labored through a raw, sub-zero night and well into a blustery dawn before they were sure that all passengers were out of the battered steel coaches.

The dead:

DR. GUY ROTHFUSS, 32, of Williamsport, brother of Dr. Paul Rothfuss, deputy State secretary of health.

WASHINGTON DANSHAW, of Tamaqua, the fireman.

WILLIAM RAMP, of Tamaqua, the engineman.

Sixteen of the injured were students of Bucknell University at Lewisburg, homeward bound for a vacation between semesters. For a time today one of the students was listed as "unidentified dead," but a check-up showed all were accounted for.

Two of the injured, Mrs. Calara Brownell, of Williamsport, and Fred Fulton, of Muncy, were reported in serious condition at Mary Packer Hospital late tonight. Only nine of the other victims still were receiving treatment.

The train ripped away two spans of the bridge in its dive, the locomotive plowing to within a few feet of the ice-clad Susquehanna. Behind it three coaches sprawled across the canal bed, the combination baggage and mail car careened to a stop squarely across the Susquehanna trail, and the fifth car hung precariously from the side of the shattered bridge.

Late today the mail car still blocked the highway, although it was hoped to reopen the road tonight.

Nurse Is Absolved In Woman's Death

Providence, R. I., Jan. 31 (AP).—A grand jury here today condemned police for "bungling" and refused to charge a young nurse with the murder of her patient.

Police Inspector Leo Vanasse, of Woonsocket, announced a month ago that the nurse, 26-year-old Marie Sevigny, told him she administered a caustic agent to Mrs. L. Valmore Normandin, 47, to end her suffering.

The grand jurors said that, in their opinion, the patient, Mrs. Normandin, wife of an auditor for the State alcoholic beverage commission, died December 11 of poison which she administered to herself.

Girl, 20, Is Freed In Farmer Slaying

Lena Eperly gave evidence Prosecutor Claude A. Joyce said aided in convicting Jack Hall, 29, of the murder of Marshall Clay, 75-year-old Wayne County farmer.

Circuit Judge Naaman Jackson, who sentenced Hall to life imprisonment, dismissed the indictments against the girl at Joyce's request. He ordered her held, however, to face charges of aiding Hall to escape jail three months ago.

As the holdup was in progress, a passerby observed it and notified authorities.

The sheriff's department later announced the three men had been sought for several weeks in connection with recent bank robberies in Los Angeles and outlying cities.

Branford, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—One man was killed, one captured and at least one other escaped today when an attempt to rob the Branford State Bank here was frustrated by the shouts of the bank president and a volley of gunfire from hastily armed citizens.

Convicted Slayer to Pay For Funeral of Victim

Point Pleasant, W. Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—Sam H. McCausland, son of a Confederate general, arranged today to pay the funeral expenses of the man he was convicted of slaying.

The 48-year-old Mason County farmer is under 18 years' sentence for the slaying of Howard Chester West, a World War hero decorated by five nations. West was a tenant on the McCausland farm. The Supreme Court recently refused to review the conviction.

4 Bandits Seize $15,000 In Illinois Bank Raid

St. Charles, Ill., Jan. 31 (AP).—Four men held up five employes of the National Bank of St. Charles today and escaped with between $15,000 and $20,000 in cash, one of the victims reported to the police, after he had freed himself of his bonds.

The robbers were in the bank when the janitor unlocked the doors, and seized and bound the employes as they reported for work.

Leopold Aided In Loeb Killing, Official Asserts

Prosecutor Says 'Dickie' Was Slain Because He Was 'Too Popular.'

By the Associated Press.

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 31.—State's Attorney W. R. McCabe tonight asserted his investigation had dug up new evidence buttressing his theory that Richard Loeb was slashed to death in "a deliberate murder plot" in which Nathan Leopold may have had a part.

He branded the statement by James Day, 23-year-old robber, that he had wielded a razor on Loeb in self-defense against improper advances by the slayer of Bobby Franks "obviously false and concocted before the murder was committed."

Public Welfare Director A. L. Bowen of Gov. Horner's cabinet joined McCabe tonight in swinging to the theory that Richard Loeb was premeditatedly slain, he said as he returned here, "to clear up a number of things to the Governor's satisfaction."

Although Day refused to budge from his account of Tuesday night's slaying when the prosecutor questioned him at the prison during the day, McCabe insisted "it is increasingly evident that Loeb was the victim of a plot and that Day was not its sole author."

"Loeb was tremendously popular throughout the prison," McCabe said. "His partner in the Franks crime, Leopold, on the other hand, because of his supercilious intellectual snobbery, is generally disliked."

"I shall work on the belief that Leopold or some other prisoners got fed up with Loeb's popularity—wanted his place in the general favor—and plotted this murder."

The prosecutor announced he had gathered fresh facts in a three-hour interview with Edward Skeplowski, cell partner of Loeb at the Stateville Penitentiary, but declined to make them public.

Day, 23-year-old robber who slew Loeb in a savage razor fight, was quizzed anew in a dramatic session, but the melancholy felon declined to depart from his confession.

McCabe said Day made this reply to his insistence that he "tell the real story:"

"I've told the real story. I've got a lawyer. I will talk no more until we go to court."

The prosecutor related how Day—suddenly confronted with macabre photographs of the razor-slashed body of Loeb—covered his face with his hands and wept.

"Skeplowski said Loeb never made any advances toward him and the only differences they ever had were over the loud speaker in their cell," the State's attorney said.

N. C. Slayer Executed In Prison Gas Chamber

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 31 (AP).—E. Jenkins, 49-year-old Gaston County man, was executed in the gas chamber at State's Prison here today for murder. He was the first white man and second person to be asphyxiated here.

Fairfax Jurors Clear Hummer InHermitDeath

Panel Rejects Murder Story of Colored Man Who Pleaded Guilty.

After deliberating only one hour and ten minutes, a jury in Fairfax County courthouse late yesterday acquitted Hugh Hummer, a 50-year-old plumber, of a charge of murder in the slaying of Truman Brush, aged hermet, last August.

Hummer, swarthy despite his long stay in Fairfax County jail, stepped from the courtroom a free man, exactly five months to the day from the time he was arrested.

Just before he left the court, Hummer thanked the jury which found him not guilty of a crime which stirred the entire countryside.

"I thank you gentlemen for finding me innocent," he said.

Later Hummer shook his head and told reporters:

"I can't figure out why that fellow (meaning Henry Edwards, Negro, who linked him to the slaying) ever told such stories about me.

"There'll always be a stigma on my name here just because I was in jail and charged with the killing. I think I'll move somewhere else and try to forget this."

Hummer's case went to the jury yesterday afternoon after summations and final pleas were made by Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown and Defense Counsel Madison Hill and Harlan Wood.

Testimony was finished Thursday. On the stand Hummer, a self-possessed, sturdy man who has spent the greater part of his life in manual labor, denied the testimony of Edwards, which linked him to the murder last August.

Both Hummer and Edwards were indicted in the case of the old hermit's death. Earlier this week the Negro pleaded guilty, and on the stand Hummer charged the black man's testimony was a "frame-up."

How he discovered the battered body of Brush was recounted on the stand by the plumber, who said he was taking provisions to Brush's home when he discovered the beaten form near a wooded path.

Mother Who Bore 13-Lb. Baby Dies

Mrs. Dena Pappas, 46, who Saturday gave birth to a baby weighing 13 pounds and 4 ounces, the largest recorded in the District, died yesterday in Homeopathic Hospital.

Complications resulting from a Caesarean operation brought death. Physicians Thursday thought Mrs. Pappas was on the road to recovery, but early yesterday she sank into a coma and never regained consciousness.

Mrs. Pappas was the mother of 12 children, eight of whom are living. A native of Greece, she and her husband, Theodore, a truck driver at City Market, lived at 811 Third street.

Young Theodore's record weight at birth astounded medical men, and only Thursday he made his bow to the public in the press. His birth weight was just an ounce less than the combined birth weight of the Dionne quintuplets.

Sarcophagus Yields 900-Year-Old Mystery

Kiev, U. S. S. R., Jan. 13 (AP).—A mystery dating back perhaps 900 years came to light today when a Soviet inspection committee opened the sarcophagus of King Yaroslavl the Wise, first king of Kiev, who died in the year 1054 A. D.

Disjointed skeletons of two persons, instead of one, were found in the sarcophagus—apparently a man and a woman. Neither was identified, but the condition of the coffin indicated it had been plundered, probably in the dim past.

All the finery supposed to have been buried with Yaroslavl was missing.

The king's wife is buried at Novgorod, some distance from Kiev. The monarch's saracophagus has been left for many years in the Kiev Cathedral.

Liggett Widow Names Editor's Killer in Court

Points to Liquor Salesman as Man Who Held 'Flaming Gun.'

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Jan. 31.—The widow of Walter Liggett testified today that a "flaming gun" clutched by Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld, killed her husband, militant publisher, last December 9.

Attired in black, Mrs. Liggett successfully fought back emotion as she identified the liquor salesman, on trial for murder, as the assassin.

Her testimony was regarded by the prosecution as a high point in its efforts to prove that Blumenfeld, angered by caustic criticisms Liggett had published against a liquor syndicate, participated in the fatal ambush.

The widow, who saw her husband felled before her eyes in the alley back of their apartment, said he stood aside to let an approaching car pass his parked machine.

"As the car came close, I saw a man leaning out of the window grinning and he had a gun and flame was coming from the gun," she said.

After hearing the shots, she testified, she saw her husband "lying on the pavement."

While a jammed courtroom looked on, Mrs. Liggett rallied from what appeared to be the verge of collapse, and, replying to whether the man she saw with the gun in the car was in the courtroom, said: "Yes, that man," indicating Blumenfeld.

Earlier in the day, Wesley Andersch, a mechanic, testified he saw the killer and identified him as "Kid Cann."

Legal 'Service' Challenge Filed By Mrs. Nixon

Claims Papers in Divorce Suit of Officer's Second Wife Blew Away.

The question of when is a "service" not a "service" was put directly to the District Supreme Court yesterday when Mrs. Anne Cooke Nixon, third wife of Capt. Thomas Hay Nixon, U. S. A., asked the court to decide whether she had been officially notified that she was named in the suit for divorce brought by Capt. Nixon's second wife.

It all revolves about a summons given by Special Deputy Harold Scott, who claims he placed the papers in the lap of the third Mrs. Nixon. She claims, and her contention is supported by her husband, that the papers blew out of the opposite side of the car and were lost to them. They wonder now if such a "service" actually constitutes "service."

The reply of Scott was that the papers were placed in the lap of the former Anne Cooke, daughter of a prominent Chevy Chase family, who is the third Mrs. Nixon. "I laid those papers right in her lap," he said yesterday. "She was served all right," he said.

In her suit, the second Mrs. Nixon complained the divorce obtained by her husband from her in Pennsylvania about a year ago was invalid because he was not a resident of the State. Shortly after the decree was entered, Capt. Nixon married the socially prominent Anne Cooke, of Chevy Chase.

Another angle of the case is scheduled to come up next week when R. J. Conway, clerk of the Stonleigh Hotel, is to face a possible contempt citation for allegedly helping Mrs. Nixon avoid service of the divorce papers in her suit.

New Sanctions Will Mean War, Il Duce Warns

Italy Ready, Mass Attack Will Not Be Easy, Says Editorial.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Rome, Jan. 31.—Further sanctions against Italy may automatically develop into a blockade, and a blockade means war, Premier Benito Mussolini's own newspaper, Popolo D'Italia, said editorially in its Saturday morning issue.

This blunt warning to European countries followed a decree today by Mussolini calling to the colors officers of the aviation and engineering corps born in 1912. The decree had added significance in view of Il Duce's orders to the cabinet yesterday to prepare the nation for "possible eventualities of tomorrow," presumably meaning trouble on the continent.

"Those thinking that war against Italy by many nations would be an easy affair would be mistaken," the editorial said. "Italy has been prepared for a long while for any eventuality and will defend herself with nails and teeth."

An "Appeal" Issued.

The editorial, presumably approved by Mussolini, was captioned: "An Appeal to the Students of Europe."

"Europe is gliding gradually down the decline of sanctions, at the bottom of which there is unavoidable war," the editorial stated. "It will not be the politician who fights, because mobilization will call youth firstly, university students principally.

"The students of Paris and Brussels and all the great cities of Europe, together with the peasants, face the first signal to war and the march toward the furnace. The politicians choose to preach a sectarian crusade from their easy stalls in Parliament, protected this time by machine guns. It is the politicians, therefore, that are to be denounced right now.

"It is not Italy who desires war. Italy only wishes for security in Africa and peace in Europe.

"Blockade Means War."

"Sanctions will make the conflict (Italo-Ethiopian war) harsher. The supply of dum-dum bullets to the wild Amharas will make the war crueler. An embargo against Italy may automatically develop a blockade and a blockade will mean war.

"This war would not be limited to operations for colonial security, but would be a war resulting in the extermination of Europe."

The decree recalling the 1912 aviation and engineer corps officers was published in the official gazette. Those affected are mostly from the radio and electrical divisions of the engineer corps.

Meanwhile, Italy's armies on the southern front of Ethiopia strengthened their positions today and organized new communication systems, reportedly preparatory to another big push, perhaps toward Addis Ababa.

Searching Party Reaches Body Of Mt. Rainier 'Thrill Climber'

Mount Rainier National Park rangers, who last night were struggling through the drifts to bring back the body of Delmar Fadden, whose attempt to scale the 14,408-foot peak ended in death. Left to right—Oscar Sedergren, Bill Butler, Chief Ranger John M. Davis, Carl Tice.

Storm Brewing Over Lofty Peak May Force Group to 'Hole In;' Aviator, Serving as Guide, Reports Temperature 30 Below Zero.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, Jan. 31.—The body of Delmar Fadden, "thrill climber," who perished on snow-swept Mount Rainier, was reached by a party of climbers after a perilous ascent to the 13,000-foot level, an aviator reported late today.

Elliott Merrill said he saw the spike-shod group of five reach its objective at 3:15 p. m. (6:15 p. m. Eastern standard time).

The group dropped down on the ice and snow apparently to rest after their 12-hour climb from an elevation of 6,000 feet.

Merrill estimated the temperature at 30 degrees below zero. Signs of a storm brewed over the 14,408-foot peak indicated the climbers, who seek to recover the youth's body, may have to "hole in" before reaching the comparative safety of Steamboat Prow, rocky outcrop at the 9,000-foot elevation.

Aided by an atrplane, the climbers crawled slowly over storm-swept ice fields toward the body. The plane flew above them throughout the day, dropping streamers as guides over the perilous slopes above the 10,000-foot level.

The body was sighted during an airplane search. It was at the foot of an avalanche.

A blizzard driven by a 60-mile-an hour gale temporarily halted the party early this morning, but they started the last precarious 4,000-foot advance at 3 a. m.

Fadden, 23 years old, started his attempt secretly January 12. Such climbing is not permitted at this time of the year.

Rangers said whether he reached the summit, 14,408 feet above sea level, may not be known until summer, when the record book will be examined.

The climbers planned to wrap the body in canvas and lower it down the mountain side with ropes on a toboggan.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Manhattan Promenade.

New York, Jan. 31.

HUMAN interest story of the new French Casino show is a $50-a-week showgirl, described on the program as Arlette Simone . . . She is the widow of multi-millionaire, Alexander Stavisky, who killed himself when accused of getting away with $40,000,000 . . . Now she's content to draw $50 a week here on Broadway, happy to get away from the reminders of the scandal and tragedy that gave the finger-pointers pleasant work to do . . . As in the Loeb case, the survivors of scandal are the ones who suffer most . . . Stavisky took the easier way out and left the harder trail to his widow . . . Loeb, having once disgraced his family, with complete shamelessness, disgraced them again, and his violent death closes a document of family agony with which all of us can sympathize.

Bird-cage number, first act finale of the new show, hits a new high in stage production effect . . . Clifford Fischer can take the bow on it . . . English mannequins, something new to Stem stages, each of them 6 feet all, parade in the bird-cage wearing the plumes of peacocks, ostriches, birds of paradise, red birds, etc., etc., and the effect is breath-taking . . . Margot Blades, Toni Ellis, Peggy Bryer, Marilyn Love and Margot Rumsey are some of these British pulse-jolters, and, if I know John Robert Powers, you'll see some of these new faces on magazine covers and swankier advertisements . . . Two Frenchies, however, run away with the Croix de Gorgeous . . . Emily Andron and Andree Lorraine will do until two more exciting femmes stroll into town.

Notes: Edward G. Robinson, the Little Caesar of the flickers, spends all of his spare time here at the Metropolitan Museum of Art . . . Jack Dempsey had just taken his ailing mother back to Salt Lake when he learned that his wife's mother had died in New York . . . Did Jerry Cooper and Joan Mitchell elope to Harrison, N. Y., the other night? . . . There are six girls in the Gae Foster line who are easier on the eye than any eyefuls in the top Broadway musicals . . . Madeline Luzon, Mary Marchetti, Ruth West, Marie Carr are four of 'em . . . M.-G.-M. will screen-test Josephine Huston, who excited this column's raves two days back . . . She is the new singing sensation of the town, at the Versailles . . . Ditto the Chinese Ambassador's daughter, who makes the twinkly curtain speeches in Morris Gest's new show, "Lady Precious Stream" . . . Mrs. Dave Marx was birthday-partied last night . . . The Jack Pearls, the Benhams, Block and Sully, Gracie Barrie, the Anatole Friedlands, the George Desslers, Sid Solomon, Tom Patricola, the Bugs Baers and Mrs. Jerry Brady ate the cake . . . The Benhams will Palm Beach vacation on John Charles Thomas' yacht . . . Mrs. Jack Pearl leaves for Miami on Monday . . . Sir Stork will visit the Marx home on March 17th, St. Patrick's Day . . . Joan Abbott has joined Phil Harris' show at N'Orleans' Roosevelt Hotel.

An astounding chapter in vaudeville history has been completed in the past seven days, and the hero and heroine of the tale are Georgie Burns and Gracie Allen . . . In the vilest weather that has discomforted Broadway in many a year, Burns and Allen cracked the all-time Loew's State Theater box office record, established three weeks ago, and lifted it to the staggering total of $42,200 . . . To fully appreciate the immensity of the accomplishment, you should have been in Manhattan while Burns and Allen were achieving the new all-time high . . . It snowed, it froze, it was bitter cold, and the streets were so filled with ice that only the daredevils among the residents ventured out . . . Yet with transportation badly crippled, and in zero weather, they cracked the record . . . I say it is an astounding chapter in vaudeville history, a remarkable tribute to the drawing power of one of the grander couples of the profession.

O. O. McIntyre, in his daily column, commenting upon the fact that my Dawn Patrol Revue had cracked Dempsey's all-time record at the same theater . . . Gave me all the best of it . . . We had the tremendous advantage of playing there during New Year's week, best week on the theatrical calendar . . . The picture we had, "A Night at the Opera," was a better box-office flicker, to my way of thinking, than "Ah, Wilderness," which played with Burns and Allen, the new champs . . . Most important, our record week was made possible by the extra prices charged New Year's Eve . . . So for the new titleholders to step in during the bitterest stretch of the winter, with the streets a blur of ice ruts, and top our $41,487 total is staggering . . . I don't know anybody to whom I'd rather lose the championship, unless it were the Jack Bennys . . . The G-men of radio and screen, Georgie and Grace, have done so many nice things for the distressed of the profession that they rate the best . . . Tipoff as to their "class" is that they adopted two tots to give them the chance in life which Burns and Allen didn't have.

It was inevitable . . . Capt. Hammill's squad in the Second Precinct yesterday was put on the trail of a mysterious interloper who was scaring townspeople . . . Squad cars were sent out after him . . . They finally caught him at 17 Battery Place . . . "Go away," he told the husky detectives, "I wanna press the first valve down" . . . He was taken to Bellevue a few hours ago for observation . . . They should have sent the writers of the song along with him . . . They were accessories before the fact.

Former Kaiser Holds Delayed Birthday Fete

Doorn, Netherlands, Jan. 31 (AP).—Former Kaiser Wilhelm II today had his quietest birthday celebration in years—a delayed observance of his 77th anniversary.

Only his wife, Hermine, former Crown Prince Frederick William and the Princess, with their sons, Louis Ferdinand and Friedrich, his stepdaughter, Henrietta, and other close relatives, were present to offer congratulations.

The former Emperor was 77 Monday, but because of the death of his cousin, King George V, the celebration was postponed and curtailed.

Land Deal Suit Accuses Beard, Local Gambler

Realty Gift Repudiated After Improvements, Says Laurel Resident.

Charging that Samuel R. Beard, Washington gambler, gave him an 8-acre parcel of land, then took it back after buildings had been erected, Joseph A. Myer, of Laurel, Md., sought retribution yesterday in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

In a bill of complaint filed at Upper Marlboro against the gambler and his wife, Mrs. Lillian Beard, Myer said he first obtained the land January 3, 1933, under a one-year "lease agreement." He said the eight acres were located at Contee, near Laurel.

Before the expiration of the "lease agreement," according to the suit, Beard "gave to the plaintiff the entire parcel and "released him from payment of rent and all other obligations provided for under the lease. He also promised to execute a good and valid deed."

On the basis of the promise, Myer said he erected buildings and improvements costing $10,000, at the same time informing Beard and his wife of the proceedings. The couple visited the place and apparently approved of the building operations, he said.

Then, Myer charged, Beard refused to give him a deed to the property and, during the past month, "connived with John Liming, jr., for the purpose of defrauding" him. The "conniving" was in the form of a one-year lease to Liming, for which Liming was to pay $35 a month, Myer charged.

Myer further charged that Beard and his wife were "unjustly, fraudulently and maliciously seeknig to appropriate the value" of the property and its improvements. He asked that the court grant him a deed. He is represented by Walter L. Green, of Hyattsville, attorney.

Fewer persons in Prince Georges County will see their property go under the auctioneer's gavel this year for lack of tax payments than last year, Ernest R. Smith, county treasurer, announced yesterday.

Smith said there were 1,760 names appended to the delinquent tax list, as compared with 1,848 last year. No estimate had been made on the number of acres or the amount of money represented.

Sale of the property will take place at 10 a. m., the first Monday in March. Those who lose property will have two years from the date of sale to redeem it. The purchaser is entitled to 10 per cent interest.

Mrs. Frances N. Foltz, who described herself as a resident of Prince Georges County and wife of a "convicted bigamist," asked the circuit court yesterday to give her a divorce from Samuel Robert Foltz, jr.

Her husband, she said, was convicted in the court of common pleas in Union County, N. J., and sentenced to serve from one to three years in the New Jersey State Prison. They were married in Perryville, Md., December 26, 1929, and she was "abandoned" in Washington in 1934. Their only child died in 1930, she said.

Prof. S. S. Steinberg, head of the department of civil engineering at the University of Maryland, has been re-elected president of the Maryland Association of Engineers for the third consecutive term. Election were held at the association's annual meeting which closed yesterday in Baltimore.

One of the resolutions passed at the meeting was that an engineers' registration law for Maryland be enacted. Commenting upon the importance of such legislation, Prof. Steinberg said:

"It will mean that persons employing the title of engineer thereafter will be accredited and qualified professionals."

Opposition to the present method of administering the Maryland gross receipts tax is growing among members of the Prince Georges County legislative delegation, it was learned authoritatively last night.

Under the setup of the emergency 1 per cent levy on total sales of merchandise and other articles, enacted by the 1935 General Assembly, the revenue is collected generally all over the State and then distributed in accordance with relief needs in the various political units.

Baltimore City, with its large group of unemployed, is obtaining the greater portion of the tax fund, according to a recent report of the State comptroller. Official figures show that the city has received a considerably larger amount for relief than it has contributed in taxes.

The legislators from Prince Georges County are reportedly urging the enactment of a general State-wide tax, to be administered by the State Government. Following deduction of the cost of administration, each political unit would receive for relief needs the exact amount contributed by it.

No definite means of taxation has been decided upon by the county legislators, though they are definitely committed against a sales tax, which, they say, would work great hardships on business men in the metropolitan areas.

Newly-Found Scrolls Tell of Ancient Life

Jerusalem, Jan. 31 (AP).—Archeologists of the American Colt expedition expect seven papyrus scrolls, whose discovery was announced today, to throw new light on church history of the early Christian era.

The scrolls, in good condition, were found on the site of Auja Alhafir, ancient Byzantine town in southern Palestine. They form the first complete record ever uncovered.

One, which has been partly deciphered, was reported to bear the name of Justin II, known as the "Mad Emperor" Flavius Justinus, who ruled the eastern Roman Empire from 563 to 578.

Saito Message

triotism and sincere purposes have to be appreciated."

The Ambassador equally denied Mr. Roosevelt's assertion in his message that the situation in Asia has in it "many of the elements that lead to the tragedy of a general war."

At no place did he mention, specifically, the President's message, but the fact that he was replying to it was clear when he said:

"Japan seeks—as must now be well known—only her security."

Japan's Natural Province.

Explaining Japan's claim to a special position in the Orient, Saito said:

"Up to the time of the World War all the great nations of the west possessed territory in East Asia which they had taken from the Chinese or other peoples near to Japan. Those Occidental aggressions had caused the Japanese to wage several minor and at least one major war.

"Naturally, our people want no repetition of these western encroachments into their sphere of the world. The United States would countenance favorably none in any part of the Americas from Europe or Asia."

The ambassador suggested that Japan has a responsibility in stabilizing backward world areas similar to the influence Britain and the United States have exercised in world history. He contended that Wherever Japanese have gone "they have enormously improved conditions for the interest and welfare of local peoples." He cited specifically benefits to Formosa, Korea and Manchuria and implied that Japan could similarly help China.

"It appears it is increasingly becoming a responsibility of nations with abiliy and experience of good government to help less fortunate sister ntions in establishing law and order," he said. "Such a role has been played with credit by great powers like the United States and Great Britain. More has to be done in the future so that human civilization may not lag behind the progress of material science."

Seeks Clear Understanding.

Citing recent Japanese overtures for closer Chino-Japanese co-operation, Saito said that "these proposals have been motivated by a sincere desire that the relationship between China and Japan would turn a new page of understanding and co-operation. It is our great wish, not only in the interests of China herself, but also in our interests, that that country would come to enjoy law and order and take to a path of progress and prosperity."

Saito asserted that Chino-Japanese co-operation in combatting the spread of communism was one of the proposed improvements.

Saito said that Japan sought naval parity as security against aggression and reiterated that Japan does not want a naval race and sees none in prospect.

Russians Fear Grave Outcome In Border Clash

Tokyo's Reply to Protest Awaited; Incident Held 'Most Serious.'

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Jan. 31.—The Soviet government, awaiting a reply from Tokyo on its protests aginst yesterday's border clash, took the view today that it was one of the most serious developments in months in the strained Far Eastern situation.

Reports here said both Japanese and Russians had been killed and wounded in hand-to-hand fighting which followed alleged invasion of Soviet territory by more than 100 Japanese-Manchukuoan troops.

Soviet accounts said the fighting started when four Manchukuoans, dressed as civilians, were accosted at the Russian border in the Grodekovo region by border guards. The alleged invaders opened fire, it was reported.

Then an entire company of troops crossed the frontier, necessitating reinforcements to the guard. The Japanese-Manchukuoans were finally driven back over the border, the Russian account related.

At Moscow, Tamekichi Ota, Japanese Ambassador, was invited to the Soviet foreign office where the Russian attitude, described as a "decided protest," was made known.

The Japanese Ambassador transmitted the protest to Tokyo.

The engagement occurred, it was declared, in the same sector where 100 Manchurian soldiers were reported to have killed their Japanese officers and escaped to Soviet soil.

Brazil to Pay

bonds payable in 4½ years. Manufacturers and exporters receiving these could take them to the export bank for discount with the understanding that the funds would finance credit transactions in other countries.

Negotiations involving the Export-Import Bank, the Bank of Brazil, Brazilian government, and the foreign trade council seeking ways and means of liquidating the "frozen" exchange in the South American nation have been in progress since last November.

The sum involved accumulated before negotiation of the American-Brazilian trade agreement, which provided for future exchange to pay for current transactions. Settlement of the question is expected by Administration officials to considerably improve American trade relations with Brazil, one of this country's best customers.

Accepting the principles of the foreign trade council's proposal, the Export-Import Bank committed itself to assist in refinancing up to $17,000,000 in "frozen" exchange.

Jones has been offered the presidency of the Export-Import Bank to succeed George N. Peek, who resigned because of a disagreement with Secretary Hull on foreign trade policies.

Sarraut Regime Gains Victory In Test Ballot

Deputies Uphold Program, 361 to 165; Right and Center Critical.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 31.—The Chamber of Deputies gave the new government of Premier Albert Sarraut a 361-to-165 vote of confidence tonight on its program to keep France and the franc safe until the spring elections.

Sarraut found his big majority mainly in the Left, after the Right and Center had bitterly attacked the government as a patchwork of politically incongruous ministers, including Socialists and millionaires.

The premier's policies, which the chamber approved, are to seek within the League of Nations an end to the "murderous hostilities" in Ethiopia, and to strive for business recovery and fair elections.

The general elections probably will be held late in March. The vote tonight was the cabinet's first test in the chamber.

Sarraut, in his declaration of policy, said he intended to suppress street fighting. He threatened the dissolution of any political organization starting a demonstration.

His warning was in answer to a Socialist demand that he prevent nationalist demonstrations February 6, the anniversary of the bloody 1934 riots, and check semi-military political forces such as the veterans' organization, Croix de Feu. This was advanced as a condition of Socialist support.

The majority was even larger than Sarraut's supporters had predicted.

Leftists applauded when Sarraut promised to observe France's obligations under the League Covenant and to use "public diplomacy" in foreign affairs.

In expressing the government's hope for an early end to the African war, Sarraut mentioned his "deep affection for the Italian people."

Threat to President Gets Man 90 Days

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—With a bowed head, Austin Phelps Palmer, 51-year-old retired business man, today heard a sentence of 90 days imprisonment imposed upon him for sending threatening letters to President Roosevelt.

George Gordon Battle, attorney for the once wealthy Park avenue defendant, had pleaded for "extreme leniency." The maximum penalty would have been five years imprisonment and $1,000 fine.

"There must be a deterrent to such activites," said Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson, imposing sentence. "The receiver of such a letter never knows whether the writer is serious or not."

In pleading for leniency, Battle told the court that Palmer never had recovered from the shock of his wife's death in 1930, and that dwindling wealth had caused him to blame the Government for his troubles. The letters to the President, the attorney said, furnished an "emotional outlet" with no intent to harm.

4 Women Among 22 In Gaming Raid Net

Four smartly-dressed women were among 22 persons brought to police headquarters and later released, following a raid yesterday on an elaborate alleged gambling establishment in the 1700 block of H street northwest.

Members of the vice squad making the raid reported an intricate system of buzzers to warn of a raid. Two radios and several telephones were used to get race reports. Thirty-four race slips and an adding machine also were confiscated, police said. No one was booked.

The vice squad, led by Sergt. G. C. Deyoe, also pounced on an alleged "numbers" and horse-race betting establishment in the First block of Myrtle street northwest. Four colored persons were held, but released later.

'Pauper' Leaves Fortune.

St. Thomas, Ont. (AP).—Believed to have been a poor man, William Richardson, retired miner, left $100,000 to the Red Cross Society, it was discovered when his will was probated. Richardson's estate was made up of huge bank deposits and stock holdings. He left a total of $120,000.

Court Absolves Dealer of Selling 'Degraded' Milk in Montgomery

Gas Rate Saving Becomes Effective Today to All Users.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Charges of selling "degraded" milk as Grade "A" to the Montrose School brought against Otis Watkins, milk dealer of near Rockville, by the county health department, were dismissed yesterday by Judge Harold C. Smith in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville.

Watkins was represented by Attorney F. Barnard Welsh. The prosecution failed to show that Watkins was delivering milk he had produced or that the milk was not of grade "A" standard.

The Montgomery Players, who are participating in the District's annual one-act play tournament with their vehicle, "The House with the Twisty Windows," will give a preview of the play tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Somerset School. Maxine Mitchell, of Silver Spring, has the lead in the drama.

A resolution favoring a general re-assessment of Montgomery County properties, looking toward the equalization of the property assessments, was adopted at the meeting of the Montgomery-Howard County Pomona Grange yesterday at Burtonsville, Md.

The group also adopted a resolution petitioning representatives in the Legislature to favor a reduction in the license fee on trailers up to a capacity of 1,000 pounds to $2.

A third resolution was adopted petitioning the State Senator and members of the House of Delegates to introduce measures at the coming special session whereby the present anti-trapping law of Montgomery County would be repealed and a law enacted whereby the following provisions could be carried out: That the name of the owner be placed on all traps; that all traps be visited at least once in every 24 hours; that the regular game law penalties be provided and applied for the violation of the provisions of this law.

Miss Ruth Shoemaker, member of the House of Delegates from Montgomery County, spoke at the afternoon session of the meeting on "Legislative Matters Before the Legislature at the Special Session."

A new schedule of gas rates that will save consumers of city gas furnished by Montgomery County subsidiaries of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light Cos. approximately $50,000 annually will go into effect in the county today.

The $50,000 annual decrease in charges represents a reduction of approximately 10.9 per cent. This reduction, however, absorbs the temporary 8.5 per cent reduction that was ordered by the Maryland Public Service Commission more than a year ago, so that the actual net saving over current rates will total only about $11,000 per year.

The new lower rates will apply to both domestic and commercial services, the commission announced in reporting the new schedule, and customers using gas for home heating also will share in the reduction.

Voting machines and new registration methods will be demonstrated in the auditorium of the Glen Echo firehouse next Thursday at 8 p. m. Voters and new residents of the community have been invited by the mayor and town council to attend.

A study of county government and of legislation affecting women and their interests by the Woman's Democratic Club of Montgomery County has been adopted as one of its major activities for the year by its executive and advisory boards. The group plans, through its legislative chairman, Miss Ruth Shoemaker, of Bethesda, who is a member of the Maryland House of Delegates, to have a definite program of legislation to offer, both at the special session of the General Assembly in March and the 1937 session.

Further action on the establishment of a police court in Takoma Park, Md., was taken at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Takoma Park elementary school.

The association accepted the recommendations made by the traffic committee, headed by Mrs. George A. Cook. These recommendations will be presented to the town council. They include the endorsement of a local police court, which will have to be requested from the State Legislature; the building of continuous sidewalks on both sides of Philadelphia avenue within two blocks of the school, and adequate police protection for the Prince Georges school on Ray road as well as the Philadelphia avenue school and the Takoma Park-Silver Spring school.

Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer, will address a meeting of the Maryland Teachers Association at the Woodside School Tuesday at 8 p. m. He will discuss the advantages of inoculation to prevent diptheria.

The monthly meeting of the Woodside Park Civic Association, scheduled for next Wednesday, has been postponed to Wednesday, March 4, due to the illness of both the president and vice president.

Communion services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md., with the minister, Dr. Ralph D. Smith, giving the communion meditation. Dr. Smith will give a stereoptican lecture on "Our Neighbor, Mexico," at 8 p. m., and there wil lbe special music.

Dorothy Radde Emery and her assistants, Willa Semple and Ione Hoffman, will present a group of children in recital at the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church today at 3 p. m. The program will be piano solos and selections by the rhythm orchestra, which is composed of children from 3 to 7 years.

Prize Winners Are Announced At Seed Show

15th Conference of Crop Improvement Group Ends in Warrenton.

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 31.—The fifteenth annual conference of the Virginia Crop Improvement Association closed here today with announcement of winners in the parelleling State seed show.

Edgar Conrad, Hillsboro; B. A. Rucker, Delaplane, and B. M. Miller, in the order named, were declared first, second and third winners in the adult crop judging contest. They received gold, silver and bronze medals. Thirty-five were entered in the contest.

Among speakers at the last day of the meeting were Prof. C. W. Holdaway, of the Virginia agricultural experiment station, Blacksburg, who spoke on "Adjusting Farm Operations to Present-Day Conditions." Profitable crop production is as essential as profitable cows, he told the assembled farmers.

T. B. Hutcheson, V. P. I. agronomist, told his audience that agriculture must be conducted in such a manner that every form of plant life taken from the soil will bring more than it costs to replace it.

Other speakers were S. S. Obenshain, assistant agronomist at the Blacksburg experiment station, and W. H. Byrne, extension agronomist, and former secretary of the Virginia Crop Improvement Association.

Annapolis Seeks Slum Clearance

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 31.—Relief clients faced with high rents demanded by Annapolis landlords would be aided by a WPA slum clearance project, an application for a preliminary survey of which has already been filed, Mayor Louis N. Phipps declared today.

The mayor, agreeing with Sheriff Joseph W. Alton's charge that small property owners are getting the major portion of the relief clients' pay checks by charging extravagant rents, said Annapolis awaits a WPA allocation of $1,500 for a slum survey, a prerequisite before slum clearance can be obtained.

Sheriff Alton advocated an investigation yesterday after receiving numerous complaints that the greater part of relief checks were used to pay rent. He said relief clients suffered hardship and inconveniences, which relief money was supposed to prevent.

Frank Avalear, Laundry Head, Is Dead at 59

Owner of Firm at Silver Spring, Md., Will Be Buried Monday.

Frank Pratt Avalear, owner of the Avalear Laundry at Silver Spring, Md., died yesterday of pneumonia in Garfield Hospital, following a short illness.

Mr. Avalear, who was 59 years old, lived at 3110 Hawthorne street. He had long been associated with laundries in the city, and had owned his business in Silver Spring for several years. He was a member of Federal Lodge, F. A. A. M.; of Mithras Lodge of Perfection, Scottish Rite Masons, and of Almas Temple.

He was a member of the Laundry Owners' Association of Maryland, Virginia, and the District and a director of the Griffith Consumers Company. He was formerly a member of the Washington Board of Trade and of the Congressional Country Club.

Mr. Avalear, a native of Royal Oak, Md., received his education in Washington public schools.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Minnie T. Avalear; a sister, Mrs. Charles A. Johnson of Baltimore, and a brother, Matt Avalear, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held in the Hines undertaking establishment Monday at 1:30 p. m. The Rev. Dr. W. E. Price of Northminster Presbyterian Chapel, will officiate. Burial will be in the Rock Creek Cemetery.

Officers of Police Unit Plan Towson Meeting

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—Officers of the recently organized Maryland Police Association will meet at 3 p. m. Wednesday in Towson, to perfect plans for completing the organization.

The meeting will be held in the office of C. E. Stansbury, Baltimore County police marshal, president of the association. Committees will be named to plan for the next meeting of the association, to be held February 18.

Poet Addresses Legislature

Mercersburg, Pa., Jan. 31.—Dr. Archibald Rutledge, head of the English department of Mercersburg Academy here, is in South Carolina, where today he spoke before the joint session of the State Legislature. Dr. Rutledge, a native writer and contributor to many periodicals, is the poet laureate of South Carolina; an appointment given him in April, 1934.

Auto Tag Sale Starts March 15 In Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Alexandria 523.

Claude W. Fletcher, local distributor of State automobile license tags, yesterday announced they will be placed on sale on March 15. The deadline for the use of 1935 tags is April 15. Under a new ruling the office will not be kept open at night and motorists are warned to secure their licenses prior to the deadline, as they will be subject to arrest after that date.

During the year 1935 Fletcher sold a total of 9,366 tags, the receipts being $108,313.

Under the provisions of the law, the sale of tags cannot start until March 15, and it will be useless for persons to attempt to purchase them before the date set.

Many persons using the same number each year write to the motor vehicle commissioner in Richmond for them in advance of the sale date.

The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a dinner in the George Mason Hotel on February 18, next, when a group of Federal Housing Administration officials will explain phases of the national housing act.

Among those who will attend are R. F. Walton, Federal Housing Administration field representative; J. Reilly Stanton, District of Columbia insuring officer; Maj. C. C. Anthony, industries division, Washington; A. E. Lanvoigt, chief underwriter, District insuring office, and Henry Rowland, District insuring officer.

A jury in the corporation court yesterday, Judge William P. Woolls, presiding, rendered a verdict for Policeman John F. Kelley in the suit of Edward L. Embrey against him for $10,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received by Embrey when an automobile said to have been driven by Policeman Kelley struck him on December 29, 1934.

First Lieut. Martin D. Delaney has been designated to command a Marine Corps Reserves unit in Alexandria. The company will be known as Company E, Fifth Battalion F. M. C. R. Lieut. Mrs. Benton McMillan, United States Civil Service Commissioner, and widow of former, Gov. McMillan of Tennessee, former Ambassador to Chile and Uruguay, will speak at a meeting of the Alexandria Association on Monday in Gadsby's Tavern, at 8 p. m. The public is invited.

The Alexandria Association is devoted to the preservation of Alexandria's historic buildings and records.

Mayor E. C. Davison and City Manager E. C. Dunn were the speakers at the opening session of the Alexandria Police School last night in the city hall building. Registration was under the supervision of Sergt. J. P. Butler. The first business session of the school will be held at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Three Withdraw From 'Merit' Suit

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—With a hearing set for February 10, three complainants in a suit alleging violations of the State merit system, today had been allowed to withdraw from the action at their own request.

The three are Owen S. Harrison, William S. Marvel and Herbert T. Seymour, all members of the Board of Talbot County Commissioners. They, among others, were named complainants in a suit asking removal of Russell Summers as Talbot County road engineer and of Clarence Gischel as Anne Arundel County engineer.

The action alleges the pair were appointed by the State Roads Commission without having taken merit system examinations.

An order signed in Baltimore City Circuit Court permitted the three to withdraw. Their petition was presented by Willis Jones, counsel for the Maryland Classified Employes Association.

It asserted "* * * your petitioners, the parties complainant, have changed their minds and decided that they do not wish to remain as complainant parties."

Jones said their withdrawal would not affect the suit.

Burke Citizens Oppose Closing Of Rail Station

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The Lee District Improvement Association, meeting at Burke, Va., made plans to oppose the closing of the Burke railroad station as an agency station by the Southern Railway. A committee, composed of Mrs. J. E. Staub, J. T. Blincoe and Herbert Haar, was appointed to appear before the State Corporation Commission in Richmond on February 18 to oppose the petition of the railroad.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors will be asked at its meeting next week to oppose the closing of the station and the support of Representative Howard W. Smith, State Senator John W. Rust, and Delegate John C. Mackall will be sought.

The association voted to ask the supervisors to increase the allowance for the outside poor of the county from 50 cents a week per person to one dollar a week for those entirely destitute, sick or crippled.

Seeking to have the original names restored to the colonial roads of Fairfax County, a letter was ordered sent to H. G. Shirley, State highway commissioner; Wilbur C. Hall, of the State conservation commission, and R. I. Mount, resident State highway engineer. The roads now are designated by numbers. The following roads were included in the petition: Old Ox road, Rolling road, Guinea road, King's highway, Lawyer's road and Pohick road.

The association voted to donate $25 to the fund being raised to establish a rural recreation center in Fairfax County.

W. Hammond Cranford and Mrs. Fannie Brice were awarded the prize for essays on "The Advantages of Living in Lee District."

The adies' auxiliary of the Franconia Fire Department will sponsor a round dance in the Franconia Schoo auditorium this evening, from 9 to 12 o'clock, for the benefit of the fire department. Mrs. Maude Simms is chairman of the committee in charge.

A junior circle of King's Daughters, to be known as the Nellie Custis Circle, has been organized in the Woodlawn Community, with the following officers: Linwood Collins, president; Doris Hinton, vice president; Eleanor Hinton, secretary, and Laura Simms, treasurer. Thirteen charter members were entered on the rolls of the organization, which will meet monthly. Mrs. Mildred L. Finks, of Wellington Villa, county president of the King's Daughters Circles, and Miss Sarah Cox, of Woodlawn, assisted in the organization.

The Guild of St. John's Episcopal Church at McLean, Va., will give its second informal dance of the season this evening in the parish hall, beginning at 8:30. Bright Carper again heads the floor committee, with Mrs. Floyd Gantt in charge of decorations, Mrs. John Ankers of refreshments, Miss Sallie L. Ball of tickets, and Stuart T. Terrett, jr., of the door.

Merit System Exams To Be Held in Annapolis

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP). — State merit system examinations will be given tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the high school auditorium, Annapolis.

Tests will be for junior and senior clerk, junior and senior stenographer, senior typist, junior and senior welfare worker, and welfare worker in charge. Included among those taking tests will be employes of county boards of welfare who have been working under temporary assignment. The Annapolis tests are the first to be given outside Baltimore. Similar examinations will be held in other cities of the State.

Even Redingotes take to Boleros

Very new and a delightful variation of the dinner suit theme is the evening redingote that borrows from the Spanish. A glamorous tropical print of pure-dye silk contrasts strikingly with black or navy, in the frock sketched. The bolero and coat-skirt, by the way, are two separate pieces in this model. Another bolero-redingote, that also features the chic padded shoulders, turns to Persia for its print's inspiration. Misses' sizes.

A Lone Wolf?

Gov. Hoffman's motive in granting a reprieve to Bruno Richard Hauptmann is amply explained by his orders to the New Jersey State police. At first it appeared that the Governor was chiefly interested in removing any possible doubt as to Hauptmann's guilt. Now it is evident that his underlying purpose is broader than the insurance of unquestionable justice to this one man. He demands that the long arm of the law shall also reach other parties to the crime.

Too often cases involving several malefactors are closed when the lips of one are sealed by death. The result is a miscarriage of justice less serious only in degree than complete failure to "break" criminal mysteries. Obviously investigations into major crimes of this character should never be closed until all the pertinent facts are known. Considering the issue before him in this light, Gov. Hoffman concludes that "the ultimate fate of Hauptmann is almost the least important feature of the case."

There is no definite indication that the Governor doubts Hauptmann's guilt of the crime for which he was convicted. But he rightly believes that it would be unwise to proceed with the execution of the prisoner while so many loose ends of the evidence lead to unanswered questions. Mr. Hoffman's queries do not throw any new light upon the case. Nor do they in any respect undermine the testimony on which the carpenter was convicted. Their effect is rather to direct attention to the issue of Hauptmann's colleagues in the crime.

So long as the condemned man lives, there is a possibility that he will throw more light upon the kidnaping and subsequent murder. That consideration alone, aside from the desire to see justice done in a manner above criticism, would justify the course Gov. Hoffman has taken. Shallow partisans who shouted for impeachment of the Governor are completely silenced by the disclosure that his objective is a renewed search for Hauptmann's possible accomplices.

The Forgotten Principle.

President Roosevelt's indorsement of the merit system in selecting Government employes does not contribute a new note to his philosophy of government. He has consistently advocated "the maintenance, strengthening and extension of the merit system, established in the competitive principles of the civil service act." His message to the League of Women Voters, re-emphasizing this "principle of good government," is amazing only because of the Administration's utter disregard of the policy which, in theory, the President favors.

In Mr. Roosevelt's book, "On Our Way," he expressed the belief that "it will be possible for this country to work out a system of public service that will be at least as honest and efficient as the British civil service, and that will have more initiative and adaptability." But under his administration the civil service has been progressively undermined. Instead of approaching the high caliber of the British personnel system, the White House has allowed Postmaster General Farley to put into full operation his scheme of "political clearance" designed primarily to build up a strong political machine.

The devastating effects of this wide divergence between policy and practice cannot be minimized by pointing out the difficulties of maintaining "a standard higher than the public will support." As weak as the civil service system is in many respects, the public undoubtedly prefers it to any means of distributing Government jobs as rewards for political activity. It is not the public which has failed to support the classified, competitive service. It is the politicians who have let it down.

Experience during the last half-century clearly indicates that the merit system can be improved and strengthened only under Executive leadership. Congress is too politically minded to take the initiative in the elimination of spoils. When any President is willing to acquiesce in the Congressional demand for patronage, standards for the selection of personnel are almost certain to be broken down, with consequent loss of morale throughout the Government service.

A considerable part of the responsibility for exempting about 99 per cent of the New Deal's employes from civil service regulations, therefore, runs directly back to the President. The merit system is simply one of the forgotten principles which has been laid aside in practice. Continued official lip service to that ideal does not minimize the desirability of a Nation-wide campaign to place individual competence above "political clearance."

To Save The Federal Credit.

The President's request for an appropriation of $2,249,000,000 to finance bonus payments removes the pretense that the bond-issue proposal is essentially different from outright cash disbursements. That is a frank admission for which the public should be grateful.

So far, however, no recommendations have been made as to methods of financing the outlay. Congressional leaders are most unwilling to vote new taxes in an election year. Hence it seems essential for the Administration, acting through the Treasury, to take the initiative in bringing a tax program to the attention of Congress. If Secretary Morgenthau waits for an invitation to present his plans in accordance with his conception of "orderly procedure," it is safe to conclude that no action will be taken.

If Congress defaults in its duty, President Roosevelt's vigorous condemnation of that body for failing to vote additional taxes to cover the cost of last year's bonus bill will more than justify him in advocating some proposal for raising revenue for the present law. If the Federal credit was endangered last June by irresponsible spending projects, as the President then said, it is in even greater jeopardy today. Since the President believed then that it was essential to link together appropriations and taxes, he must surely feel that it is at least as important at the present time.

Passage of the present bonus measure over his veto indeed gives the President an unexcelled opportunity to bring home to Congress and the people the folly of an unbridled spending program. The most forceful way of doing that is to insist upon calling attention to the amount of new taxes needed to meet outlays not allowed for in budgetary estimates. While nobody supposes that the entire cost of the bonus, in addition to the new farm relief bill, could be covered by taxes without grave injury to business, the Administration should undertake to find additional sources of revenue that would offset a substantial part of these outlays.

It is worth noting that the bare administrative cost of the bonus legislation is placed at $12,000,000. The revenue act of 1935, despite its oppressively high impositions upon individual and corporate incomes, is expected to yield only $222,000,000 during the fiscal year 1937. Even allowing for the fact that the effect of the new act upon revenues will not be fully felt until the fiscal year 1938, its pitiful inadequacy is conspicuously revealed.

Hence, it would be a painful but very valuable exercise to make members of Congress contemplate the problem of raising enough revenue to pay off more than $2,000,000,000 of bonus bonds. If they are appalled by the task, so much the better. At least they will be forced to consider whether they intend to lead the country toward bankruptcy by way of inflation or to reduce expenditures to a level at which they can be covered by taxes that Congress is willing to vote and the people able to bear.

A Vicious Bill.

The report that Secretary of War Dern has described the Army as "not especially in favor of the military disaffection bill" must not be overlooked on Capitol Hill. It should particularly interest those preparing to call from committee the Tydings-McCormack measure to which Mr. Dern referred. Inasmuch as the Assistant Secretary of the Navy has already testified that communistic influence upon the Navy is "absolutely infinitesmal," there seems no point in wasting further time in considering this undesirable legislation. It should die in its present pigeonhole.

The bill contains a number of features which in practical application might dangerously threaten fundamental American liberties. This is true although revisions have somewhat improved the measure since it was passed by the Senate last year. The provision making it a crime to "advise, counsel, urge or solicit" any member of the Army or Navy Reserves to disobedience has been deleted. This alteration met the reasonable protest that under these terms anyone criticizing National Guard intervention in industrial disputes might be liable to fine and imprisonment.

But nothing has been done to rid the bill of its search-and-seizure provisions. There are already adequate safeguards in the Army and Navy regulations to preserve discipline against any incitements to disobedience. It follows, then, that the principal application would probably be against civilians. In effect, it could be interpreted to define every criticism of any aspect of Army or Navy operations as a crime, as is indicated by the way the legislation would invoke the wartime espionage act.

Justifiable at a time when the Nation was at war, a permanent espionage act in time of peace clearly threatens invasion of the constitutional rights and privileges guaranteed all Americans, without which the United States might soon be indistinguishable from an Old-World dictatorship.

Behind The Swastikas.

This week Germany has celebrated the third anniversary of Adolf Hitler's accession to unchallenged power as her ruler. In spite of Der Fuehrer's praise of Nazi achievements and his professed confidence in the future of the regime, the gravity of the economic crisis that confronts Germany is overshadowing. A government that has derived so much support from promises to better the condition of the people must view with alarm the increasing unemployment and the rapid rise in living costs due to shortage of food and raw materials.

According to official reports, there were at the end of December 522,000 more German unemployed than at the end of the preceding month. Although the year-end total was slightly below that of December, 1934, it is a discouraging commentary on the efforts made to create jobs by public spending and rearmament. Moreover, part-time employment is said to be the rule in industries manufacturing goods for immediate consumption.

During a war, or even under the spur of mass enthusiasm such as characterized the early stages of the Russian efforts to build up the heavy industries, a populace may be willing to submit to the sacrifices entailed by a diversion of labor and capital to enterprises that do not satisfy their pressing consumption needs. It is a severe strain upon the public patience, however, when such deprivations become a matter of course, in times of peace, for a highly industrialized country.

Nazi policies have been chiefly responsible for cutting Germany off from access to necessary raw materials and foodstuffs. Yet no amount of collective sacrifice can make the country self-sufficient. No amount of individual industry can, under present conditions, enable it to maintain the standards of living to which the German people were accustomed. The employment provided by factories that manufacture instruments of destruction will not remedy shortages of food and clothing. Neither will money poured out of the public treasury to pay for public works provide the basis for a prosperous domestic economy in a country dependent upon foreign markets to supply many essential commodities.

The seriousness of the present German economic situation is revealed by the harsh measures taken to force farmers to deliver supplies to markets, and the use of the police to prevent profiteering in the cities. Whatever partial success may attend efforts to keep prices down, the insufficient supplies which are the cause of the price rise will continue to operate toward the disintegration of the discredited Nazi regime.

Foreign Competition.

The cabaret or vaudeville revue has proved itself a barometer of public taste almost as accurate as the newspaper. Not long ago a World Series hero or a hatchet murderer was good for at least a few weeks on Broadway and a remunerative turn around the circuit. So it would seem to be a sign that the American people are becoming world conscious when Mme. Arlette Stavisky arrives to become a show girl in a New York cabaret.

Popular interest is due to politics rather than personality in this case, for Mme. Stavisky has always remained personally inconspicuous. French tradition still insists that the place of a wife, even of a pawnbroker whose transactions affect the fate of cabinets and cause rioting in the streets, is in the home. And the lady's appearance here indicates she has failed to receive vaudeville offers in Paris, perhaps because tourists, accustomed to the high technical standards of Hollywood productions, demand that the various Parisian "Folies" employ New York dancing talent.

If political notoriety becomes valuable in vaudeville, we should not permit unrestricted competition with the American product. Some of our politicians, particularly high tariff advocates, might appropriately be induced to give up their amateur standing as entertainers and go openly into the business. The difficulty would be to persuade even such able showmen to give up the attractive sideline of statesmanship.

Florida sends out the information that there is no employment available there for outsiders. She'd better be more careful. Much emphasis on this fact might result in sinking a good peninsula.

In the interest of efficiency, it is suggested that the political parties build collapsible disappearing platforms.

Canada Considers Its Constitution.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The United States is not the only country in this hemisphere which is debating constitutional problems these days. Canada is discussing its fundamental law and the effect of its present form on the more than 10,000,000 people who live in the far-flung Dominion.

There is, however, one all-important difference between the constitutional debates in the United States and Canada. The American Constitution provides methods of amendment, and under these provisions no fewer than 21 amendments have been joined to the original document. In Canada, the chief issue is the right of the Canadian people to change their constitution as they may deem necessary from time to time.

This issue arises from the failure of the British North American act, enacted by the British Parliament in 1867, to provide the means whereby constitutional changes can be made by Canada. Down through the years efforts to open the way for amendments have been opposed by Quebec, which has been very jealous of the rights of the French-Canadian minority to employ the French language and to worship as they please.

What Mr. Dixon Said.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please allow me to correct a minor mistake in Mr. Franklyn Waltman's vivid and accurate report of the Macon convention which appeared in the "Politics and People" column of your issue of January 30.

The sentence which I would correct is: "He termed Mrs. Roosevelt's support of the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill as an infamous and outrageous insult to the people of the South."

I am a rapid, extemporaneous speaker and the reporter could, and did, easily misunderstand me. What I said was the Wagner-Costigan bill was an infamous insult to the people of the South and Mrs. Roosevelt's open lobbying for it was a most astounding performance, since the measure was introduced into Congress by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which I called the most dangerous Communist organization in America.

I made the point and reiterate it that Mrs. Roosevelt's advocacy of the Wagner-Costigan measure was a most astounding performance. But I am too much of an old-time Southerner to speak of any lady in the precise words attributed to me.

THOMAS DIXON.

The Political Pot.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I waited in vain to hear Senator Robinson reply to what, in my humble opinion, was one of the two outstanding charges in Gov. Smith's terrific indictment of the New Ordeal—the "deadly parallel" between the 1932 Socialist platform and the performance of the present Administration. Not one word did I hear, nor could I discover any reference in the press accounts this morning.

Since this happens to be a matter which concerns me keenly—and I am convinced, millions of my fellow-citizens—it is pertinent to ask "Why no reply?"

Instead of answering so grave a charge, we have had (since Saturday night) only an angry calling of names and countercharges, such as Woodrum's "disgruntled, disappointed has-beens, political nondescripts," et cetera, which must include Senators Glass and Byrd, former Senator Reed of Missouri, Gov. James E. Curley of Massachusetts, former Governors Ely, Ritchie, Davis, Baker—as well as Messrs. Bainbridge Colby, Lewis Douglass and the long line of "resigned" advisers and assistants of the present Administration. You will note I have named only those of the (formerly called) Democratic Party.

"Where the feathers fly is where the shot hits!" And when a shot hits, it hurts, besides generally scaring the quarry half to death! Is this not the reason why Gov. Smith's "Socialist indictment" was not replied to by Senator Robinson?

HARVEY MacCAULEY.
Philadelphia, Jan. 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Senator Robinson's address of January 28 he suggested that it was a cowardly thing for Al Smith to desert the present leaders of the Democratic Party in the heat of battle. May I suggest that the Senator, in casting this missile, broke a few panes in the glass house which surrounds his own rotund self. What does he consider his position to be when for the first time in the history of this Nation a majority party leader fails to cast his vote in support of his President on a veto question.

There can be only one explanation for his action, and that can be summed up in the phrase—political expediency. May I inquire which is the better? The Senator professes to be heart and soul for his chief, suggests that he be supported in all his experiments and beliefs, yet he deserts him upon the floor of the Senate.

It is only too clear that the bulk of Senator Robinson's remarks must be discounted when we consider that he is a politician, catering to all organized minorities, dependent upon their support in his campaign this year. While on the other hand we find Al Smith, who has no political office, nor any aspirations to be elected to one. Whose word is entitled to the greater credit? There can only be one plausible answer.

It is totally impossible to justify the position of this Administration by pointing out that Al Smith once advocated to some degree the aims which this Administration has blunderingly attempted to carry out. The objections which Al voiced at the Liberty League dinner are not original with him; he was merely in a position to obtain a hearing. By saying Al Smith, as President, might also have strayed from the Democratic platform of 1932 does not justify this Administration in doing so.

There are many Southerners, like myself, who prize the Democratic Party far more highly than we do its present representatives. And it is our hope that long after this wasteful bureaucratic Administration is forgotten, the Democratic Party will still be functioning. Nor do I speak as a devoted follower of Smith, nor of Talmadge or any of his ilk, but merely as an average voter, who somehow cannot reconcile this Administration with the fundamental principles of Jeffersonian Democracy.

If this Administration feels the country will prosper better under the Hamiltonian theory of government, I would be the last to challenge their right to express that belief. But I do object to the attempt to hoodwink the public into thinking that the rank and file of Southern Democracy will follow it along the trail to complete centralization of governmental power. If that is the Administration's aim, and it is becoming more clearly apparent every day, why does it not submit it to the people of this Nation, in the form of an amendment, rather than attempt to attain the desired result by insidious subterfuge. The answer is clear—they dare not submit it to the people.

A REAL DEMOCRAT.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your great paper has always been fair and just; therefore I most earnestly ask you to publish the following:

Today Americans throughout the Nation are amazed at the attitude of many of our men in public life. Their words over the radio and in the press are truly un-American. They may not realize that they are causing discontent and inflaming the minds of the radical, ignorant and dangerous element. As an American, a former soldier and a Democrat, I warn these men to cease their evil propaganda against their Nation, its laws and President. Should such men as Gov. Talmadge of Georgia and Al Smith, of New York, speaking over the radio, call the President a Communist, and our present Government Communist. Such words as these can only lead true Americans to believe them abnormal.

As a Democrat, a native Georgian, I challenge Gov. Talmadge to a public debate, in the State of Georgia or elsewhere, and defy him to accept.

THOMAS L. AVANT.
Washington, Jan. 29.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: As former Governor Alfred E. Smith says, "one man, and one man only, can answer his philippic as delivered before the Liberty League. It is Franklin D. Roosevelt and not Al Smith who has run out on the Democratic Party of Thomas Jefferson, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson in his repudiation of its cardinal principles as set forth in the platform of 1932, which Franklin D. Roosevelt so ardently took to his bosom at the time of his nomination by the Democratic Party at Chicago and upon which he pledged himself to the American Nation in his inauguration in 1933.

T. S. HARRISON.
Staunton, Va., Jan. 30.

"If This Be Treason——"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial published in your paper on January 29, entitled "New England Conscience," I find the following paragraph: "The same Massachusetts Legislature has passed a law forcing all teachers in that Commonwealth to subscribe by oath to a ritualistic patriotic incantation drafted by moronic super-patriots."

Because agents from Moscow have gotten into the schools of this country and are poisoning the minds of our children with the virus of disloyalty, it becomes necessary for the entire country to follow in the footsteps of Massachusetts and require not only the teachers but every child entering the schools to take the oath of allegiance to our constitutional form of Government. Yea, more than this, every man and every woman living under our flag and enjoying the blessings of our Government, should be required to assemble in their several communities once each year and swear allegiance to our Constitution—to our Government.

America needs a new birth of loyalty and patriotism. And all men and women who are not satisfied with what this Government offers and provides, can find what they desire in Russia. Put a man in the Department of Labor, Mr. President, who will send them there. Billions of dollars can be found for deportation. Let's rid America of the cancerous sores which are eating into our body politic.

If the editor of The Post wishes patriotic Americans to read his paper, he will apologize for that editorial "New England Conscience," and see to it that never again does such seditious writing appear in its pages.

Paraphrasing Senator Robinson's "text" last evening, has The Post the voice of America but the hand of Moscow

MARIE GRAVES BONHAM.
Gordonsville, Va., Jan. 29.

"The Greatest Industry."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is rather amusing, as well as refreshing, to read some of the letters you have been receiving since the Supreme Court rejected the AAA.

For example, the one from G. Higgins in your paper of the 22d instant. I would like very much to see him attempt to make a living raising wheat to be sold at 60 cents per bushel. I do not pretend to know how many 1-pound loaves of bread a bushel of wheat would make, but I do know that after the miller takes his toll—the bran, middlings and shorts are taken out—the remainder makes very few biscuits.

The gentleman who signs himself "A Farmer" in your issue of the 23d instant, I am inclined to think has made a mistake, because a farmer is one who derives his living from the soil, plus his labor. This gentleman I would class as an agriculturist; the difference is that he makes his living elsewhere than on a farm and spends his surplus on his farm as a hobby.

In the matter of his hay crop being sold at $13.50 per ton and then having his buyer refuse to take the last 23 tons. This, to my mind, is purely his fault. If I should sell a party 50 tons of hay at a specified price he would certainly take it or be defending himself in the courts.

I often wonder just how many of our enlightened citizens know or realize that farming is the greatest of all American industries.

Mohammedan God.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Where did your correspondent, Pegler, obtain the information that the Mohammedans worship a human being as a god? On the contrary, this idea would be abominable to them. The only god they worship is the Supreme Being, or, Allah (the Arabic name for god). I'm surprised that an intelligent person with a good education would not know this simple fact. I've known this long ago, even in my grammar school days.

The Post Impressionist

Not Kitchener Of Khartum

Post Office, Saturday.

AMONG the bubbles that this malevolent Column has long wanted to puncture was the great bubble of him whom his millions of worshipers used to call "K."—Yes, we mean Herbert Horatio Kitchener.

Oh, not the able Kitchener of Khartum when he was that! Our grudge is against the same "K" when the inflationists had blown him to his fullest circumference.

Upon his taking command of the War Office—at the age of 60—the British nation sighed relief. "K is standing no nonsense!" cried the newspapers. Wherever they could, crowds followed him. To the end, he was the British public's idol; now he is one that public's legends.

Do you remember O. Henry's story of the New York girl who couldn't go wrong—because she kept a picture of bachelor Kitchener in her hall-bedroom? His picture was as clearly in every British heart as on every British recruiting-poster: he was England's Strong and Silent Captain.

Nobody would deny Kitchener credit due him for the conquest of the Sudan or his reorganization of the Indian Army. It is true, too, that he went unwillingly to the War Office, expected to find it a chaos, and wasn't disappointed: "Dear me, what a War Office—not even a pen that will write!" It is true that there he set out to run the war-machine single-handed, with what appeared to be supernatural strength and must have been almost supernatural belief in his own capacities and the military science of his own epoch.

What we have always asked ourselves is whether his character really justified his faith—whether his training was not really outdated.

And now, entirely without our assistance, a military expert resident in Washington—H. A. De Weerd—writing in a military magazine—the Infantry Journal—implies that these questions should be answered in the negative.

Somebody else, equally daring, once called Kitchener "a bundle of highly strung nerves kept under control 999 hours out of 1,000 by an iron will:" De Weerd tells how the strong man suffered from queer complexes—hated to open letters, carry keys, answer the telephone. Lord Esher has hinted that Kitchener's "nemesis was in his past triumphs." De Weerd, never minimizing the big things that Lord Kitchener did in his time, proves that his time had passed before the birth of 1914.

To the War Office he brought no knowledge of his country's Gallic ally—he thought the French army "rotten"—and no knowledge of Haldane's reforms in the British army. Nor would he learn.

Just as he had never before paid any attention to the individual soldier—just as, after he took on from Roberts in the Boer War, he would "either run the whole show or send off his subordinates without any instructions"—so now, De Weerd well recalls, Kitchener obstinately "carried his plans in his hat," spoke in half-sentences, sheltered himself in "Cromwellian obscurity." When Lloyd George, anxious about the Serbian situation, asked if the enemy had crossed the Danube, Kitchener replied that he had no such news—whereas it had reached his office the day before.

"K doesn't read the telegrams," complained Sir Edward Carson, "and we don't see them!"

When this sort of treatment was applied as freely to military colleagues on the general staff as to civilians in the cabinet, its effects were little short of disastrous. Sir Charles Douglas, nominal chief, was snubbed daily. "The whole British military machine" had to plunge "wildly forward in the dark"—and the death of Douglas was as truly a result as were many of the deaths on the firing line.

Kitchener endorsed the disasterous Dardenelles adventure, then failed to bring off his improvement of the railroad between Salonika and Nish. The former affair cost the British 150,000 casualties; the latter fiasco made an historic joke of Sir Edward Grey's well-intentioned promise to Serbia that "England would know how to protect her ally."

Kitchener had always run his wars "on the cheap;" the demands for shells apalled his economic soul. "I am not thinking about the casualties," he groaned over the Battle of Neuve Chapelle, "but about the shells that were wasted." He frustrated the plans of the Munitions Committee in 1914. Instead of ordering new shells for the Dardenelles, he sent shells from the British front in France. When he started to raise his famous 70 divisions, he made no survey of the number of guns to go with them, nor any "systematic effort to increase the shell-filling capacity of the plants under contract." Not until the June of 1915 could he be maneuvred into committing himself as to how many machine-guns ought to be allotted to each infantry battalion—and then he told Lord Geddes:

"A minimum of four!"

The Menace.

London, Jan. 31.

THE new King of England has moved into his job with a show of confidence and poise at a time when London is the most prosperous capital in the world. It is a hard job, involving long hours and a tremendous program of baby kissing in all its guises, but the pay and other compensations are proportionate to the duties.

The only real menace which confronts King Edward VIII and which now will become more threatening day by day is the awful terror of matrimony to a man who has been a bachelor for more than forty years.

He has looked over an incalculable number of young and willing females who were led past him on nose-rings, so to speak, like livestock standing inspection at a State fair, and it is quite reasonable to say that no man ever lived who has had his pick of so great a gross tonnage of charm.

YET he arrived at Buckingham Palace a week ago a King and Emperor with all the privileges and powers which the host confers, still single, independent and defiant.

He has been simpered at and cooed at by a hundred thousand long shots of all the civilized nations. He has put the eye on fat ones and scrawny ones and on innumerable girls of all classifications in between, and he has done as much heavy duty shoving and hauling as any stevedore that ever lived, moving an enormous aggregate freight of romantic femininity around the ballrooms of many nations.

Nevertheless, he is a single man who carries his own latchkey, which now opens the door of Buckingham Palace, and still it isn't necessary for him to call up and say he is down at the pool hall shooting a few games with Kelly with the boys or remove his shoes and carry them upstairs by hand. His Majesty the King of England may come home when he wants or stay out all night if he wants, and he can drop in at any one of several palaces and castles whenever he wants and answer no questions for anybody.

THIS condition of life is deplored by many of his subjects, and the talk which is heard on every side in London today bespeaks an implacable determination to break down his resistance and marry him off.

The King has always shown fairly expert taste in companionship, so there seems to be no possibility of a deal among the available royal sets and yet those who like him most are determined to jeopardize his peace, regardless of his own preferences, in order that the crown may descend to a son of the King, if fate should be so kind.

It has even been pointed out that there is no legal reason why he should not marry an American girl, preferably from an old Jamestown or certainly an old Virginia family, and thus not only solve a situation but achieve at least a sentimental recapture of the lost province of the United States, along with its headaches and its homicide rate.

• • • •

LEST this suggestion start an uncontrollable and eventually disastrous boom in old Jamestown and Virginia estates, with their rolling acres and slave-born butlers doddering around under the weight of trays of juleps, I will add that this idea is not being promoted very seriously. It is just a thought up to this time, but legally feasible, nevertheless. There is not yet sufficient justification for the best families of Montana, Boston and the Bronx to plunge in Virginia estates and teach their daughters to talk Southern and regard "damyankee" as one word, and maybe nothing will come of it.

The King is under greater pressure, to be sure, but he is king now and an increase in pressure has been compensated by an increase in his personal independence. It will always require great fortitude to maintain his freedom, but the man who stood off the great menace for 20-odd years under handicaps of a filial and subordinate rank should be able to carry on.

Men of good will can only wish him the best of luck in a perilous situation.

Two Missing Girls Located by Police

Two girls, Edna Gertrude King, 14, of 1111 Sixth street northwest, and Doris Lillie Philo, 13, of 66 S street northwest, Langley Junior High School students, missing from home since Thursday, were located yesterday in Hagerstown, Md., police announced.

"We are so tired and hungry and have only 15 cents between us," the girls said when picked up by Hagerstown police as they entered the town at 7:30 a. m. yesterday.

According to Capt. Joseph Emmert the girls said they ran away because they failed in their school examination and were on the way to visit a relative of Doris' in Scranton, Pa.

Parents of the girls were to go to Hagerstown to bring them back yesterday, Washington police said.

Quail in Capital Area Reported Undiminished

Washington need have no fears for its quail population, according to Dr. T. S. Palmer, president of the Audubon Society of the District of Columbia.

These birds are holding their own in the Capital and vicinity and may be increasing in number, Dr. Palmer said at a meeting of the society Thursday night. A recent census showed there are 1,123 quail in the District and about 100 more in nearby outlying sections, he said.

Oil Sanction Impasse

Further Postponement At Geneva Is Explained By Fear Of Mediterranean War And Disruptive Effect Of U. S. Neutrality.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE League of Nations Committee of Eighteen has put off once more the extension of sanctions against Italy to oil. There is reason to believe that this decision, which amounts to a postponement of more drastic collective measures to terminate the war in Africa, has in part been caused by the present neutrality policy of the United States.

The members of the League decided in principle, as long ago as November 6, in favor of extending sanctions to oil when conditions should make such a move effective. The Committee of Eighteen has now appointed a body of experts to study the oil question further, to see if a really effective embargo against Italy can be put into force. Action on oil has already been delayed two months and further delay in is prospect. Meanwhile the war continues, and oil companies both here and in sanctionist countries are providing the Italian army and air force with the necessary means to proceed with the conquest of Ethiopia.

The inaction of the League on oil may be traced to two principal causes. The first is a political situation in Europe which forces the sanctionist powers to move with caution. Mussolini has used some very theratening language on the subject of League restriction of Italy's imports of oil. If an oil embargo would mean real danger of war in Europe, no one can blame the League members from holding back, or for delaying action on oil until their collective political and military preparations have reached a stage which will minimize the danger of an Italian attack.

An Italian attack on the sanctionist powers would appear suicidal, and the act of a ruler devoid of mental balance. Mussolini, however, cornered as he is by the requirements of his own prestige, may have a different viewpoint. After 14 years of expansionist speeches, military failure and diplomatic defeat brought about by a colored kingdom would mean national disgrace and personal disaster. A bold attack followed by a quick submission to a vastly superior coalition would perhaps allow him to cut a "bella figura" in the eyes of his people. However fantastic and improbable an Italian attack on the sanctionist powers may seem, the defensive arrangements which Great Britain has made with France, Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia indicate that its possibility is taken seriously.

THE second reason for delay on oil, the question of how effective oil sanctions against Italy would be, intimately concerns the United States. Both Rumania and Russia, which supply Italy with substantial amounts of oil, made their agreement in principle to an oil embargo contingent upon similar action by all oil-producing countries.

When oil sanctions were under discussion in November and December, the neutrality policy of the American Government was developing along a certain line. This line, as set forth by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull on many occasions, was official discouragement of activities which would tend to prolong the duration of war abroad. As long as this policy prevailed in Washington, the 50 nations who were trying to stop the war in Ethiopia by collective measures had reason to hope that the American Government would find means to prevent nullification by American exporters of their efforts to restore peace.

In the last two months, however, our Government has retreated from its earlier position. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has stricken out of the pending neutrality bill the provision authorizing the President to curtail the shipment of essential war materials to belligerents when he found that "to refrain from placing such restrictions would contribute to a prolongation or expansion of the war."

We have executed a general retreat on our whole policy of ceasing to aid belligerents to prolong war. Our present neutrality bill would allow the President to restrict war material exports to belligerents only to normal peacetime quotas.

• • • •

THE United States, as everyone knows, is the greatest oil producer in the world. Inevitably, therefore, our forthcoming neutrality policy must influence vitally any collective effort at Geneva to stall the Italian war machine through an embargo on oil.

In 1935 American oil shipments to Italy were 45.2 per cent greater than in 1934. In December 1935, a month of war, these shipments were as much as 446 per cent greater than in the preceding December. This increase shows conclusively that American oil exporters are aiding Italy to prolong the war, as the oil exporters of the sanctionist powers are doing in different degree.

If American oil exports to Italy should be restricted to a normal quota, say the quota for 1934, American shipments in 1936 would be 31.1 per cent less than in 1935. Under such circumstances, if the other oil-producing nations should be willing to agree to an oil embargo against Italy, while American exporters were continuing a profitable business, this embargo would not be entirely ineffective. Its actual effectivenes can only be estimated by considering the relative importance of American oil shipments to Italy during a normal year such as 1934.

According to the statistics of the Institut International de Commerce, the United States furnished Italy during 1934 with only 6.5 per cent of her gasoline imports, a relatively unimportant proportion. In lubricating oil, however, as essential to a bombing plane as gasoline, the picture is radically different. Here the American proportion of Italian imports was not less than 33.8 per cent.

Italian imports of petroleum and fuel oil from the United States are difficult to estimate in percentage figures, since these commodities are listed differently in import and export statistics. If petroleum, fuel oil, gas oil and other residues and distillates are lumped together, however, the American proportion of Italian oil imports during 1934 may be estimated at around 13 per cent.

FROM the standpoint of governments considering a collective embargo these figures are big. They may be big enough, human nature being what it is, to prevent the sanctionist countries from attempting an oil embargo.

If this should be the case, the United States will be placed in a very unpleasant position. The maintenance of our normal oil shipments to the belligerents will not only aid Italy directly to prolong the war and favor her at the expense of her victim; it will also operate indirectly but far more decisively to prolong the war by preventing other nations from undertaking further collective action.

The sanctionist countries will be affected more than ourselves because they are far more exposed to the danger and political instability that a prolongation of the war will entail. We ourselves are bound, however, to suffer some repercussions.

One result of our present policy should be better relations with Italy. Our relations with the 50 nations working for peace, on the other hand, including all our best customers, will inevitably be damaged. Many millions of people in Europe and South America will find in our action a proof of hypocrisy, and may be expected to hold up to scorn our persistent habit of talking peace and doing nothing about it. We may even rediscover the natural relationship between good will and trade.

The American people are slowly beginning to realize our predominant position in the world and the potent influence our policies must have either for better or for worse on developments abroad. They may be satisfied to play the role of an obstacle to the restoration of peace, or again they may not. They can only decide whether they consider this role honorable if the results of our pending neutrality policy are understood in advance.

Denmark-U.S. Ship Line To Abandon Service

Copenhagen, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Scandinavia - America Steamship Line, the only direct Danish passenger connection with the United States, announced today it would liquidate.

The decision followed upon an announcement by the ministry of trade that the state would not aid the line.

Started in 1880, the steamship company already has scrapped three liners and has been maintaining in service one ship, the Frederick VIII.

The Snow Train.

The latest thing in railroading is the "Snow Train" or "Blizzard Special." Eastern railroads are running special trains for ski fanatics.

• • • •

These ski enthusiasts are probably the only train passengers in the world who want their cars air conditioned on the outside and who never complain when a train is not well heated.

• • • •

They flock to the depot bellowing for blizzards and they return with a fine contempt for anybody who has spent the week-end in a warm room.

• • • •

Vim and vigor fill the train from engine to caboose. The engineer reads Whittier's "Snow Bound" aloud to the fireman en route, and when the train stops between stations they send back a yodeler instead of a flagman.

• • • •

These snow trains are probably the most red-blooded trains running today. Not an anemic passenger in a carload.

• • • •

"What's the coldest train you have running to the heaviest snowfall in the next 24 hours?" asks a prospective passenger as he phones the station.

"Well, we have the Zero Flyer," says the man at the information desk. "You'll like that."

"Good? Why, it makes no stops until the boiler freezes!"

• • • •

"What else have you?" the fanatic persists.

"How about the Snowball Express?"

"Is that a popular train this season?"

"Mister, that's the most talked of train on our list. It goes so deep into the snow country that the conductors have to wear skis to collect the fares."

"Is it streamlined?"

"Yes, and the stream is frozen!"

• • • •

Virile trains for virile people!

• • • •

It's a stirring sight to see the folks flock into the railroad station with their balbriggan jackets, earlaps, mittens and toboggans eager for their discomforts and determined to get as far from an open fireplace as possible.

• • • •

Eruption of Stromboli Fails to Harm Village

Rome, Jan. 31 (AP).—The volcano of Stromboli, on the island of that name, erupted spectacularly at 7 p. m. today and frightened villagers.

Early dispatches said the eruption was accompanied by a terrific roar and gigantic bursts of red hot ashes and lava.

Villagers, who live far down the slopes of the 3,022-foot cone, were reported unhurt, but higher fringes of forest were burning.

Underwood & Underwood.

Having succeeded in passing the bonus bill despite the President's veto, members of the Patman group of the House met yesterday to discuss ways and means of raising the necessary funds. Left to right—Representative James G. Scrugham, Nevada; Representative Adolph J. Sabbath, Illinois; Representative Wright Patman, Texas; Representative Arthur H. Greenwood, Indiana, and Representative Fred H. Hildebrandt, South Dakota. Left to right, standing—Representative Gerald J. Boileau, Wisconsin; Representative George A. fall within the ban, and the Treasury is having trouble collecting them.

Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, conferred by telephone with Representative Clifford Hope, (Republican), Kansas, who Thursday introduced a bill to pay a "tariff-equalizing" subsidy to wheat, cotton, hog and tobacco farmers. Later, Hope said the bill was drafted with Gov. Landon's knowledge, but the Kansas Governor, mentioned as likely Presidential timber, has not yet determine to give it his formal support.

Neither the House Ways and Means Committee, nor the Senate Finance Committee, which normally initiate tax legislation, has yet received word of the Administration's new revenue proposals. It is known that both groups are not anxious to undertake initiative action, as prevailing sentiment in both Houses is opposed to new taxes in an election year.

Contact with the Capitol on the proposals was supplied, however, at a White House conference between President Roosevelt and Senate Majority Lader Joseph T. Robinson. Speaker Joseph W. Burns also intimated there will be new taxes to finance the projected farm program.

Tax experts were said to feel that a bill raising any appreciable revenue from other than excise sources would have to dig deeply into the income structure. Tentative plans outlined as a basis for discussion would lower married exemptions from $2,500 to $1,500, and single exemptions from $1,000 to $700. If this tack is taken, the normal income rate might also be raised, it was said.

If the Administration decided to go the full route in this field, and it is not expected to for obvious political reasons, it could raise a billion dollars, bringing this country's income tax structure nearly to a level with Great Britain's.

Experts are said to have reached the conclusion that no appreciable revenue can be raised from incomes of over $100,000, but see some revenue to be gained between the $10,000 and $100,000 classes.

Three excise tax plans have been studied, ranging from the non-pyramiding variety used in Great Britain, to the retail sales tax, and the so-called French turnover tax, which is levied at every transaction. The first of these three is viewed with most favor, although broad use of excises may bring political repercussions which the Administration seeks to avoid.

New Deal fiscal policies were viewed with concern in the Chamber of Commerce Federal Finance Committee's report to the chamber's board yesterday.

Government financing through heavy borrowing was declared "clearly inflationary" in the committee's statement, which said that although this "method of inflation differs from the issuing of paper currency, the ultimate result of its continuance may not differ."

"Circumstances indicate not an approach to a balanced budget, but an approach to greater disorder in financing," Chairman Clausen said.

Devastating Consequences.

Pointing out that there have been seven consecutive years of budget deficits, he observed:

"It must not be overlooked that every nation which has permitted deficits in any way comparable for such periods of time has found the greatest difficulty, if not the impossibility, of escaping the devastating consequences of uncontrolled inflation."

The report said all available evidence indicates the next fiscal year will bring the largest revenues, the largest expenditures and the largest deficit in our peace-time history.

"The prepayment of the veterans' bonus, with its extra gratuity of $1,500,000,000, will add another $2,000,000,000 or more to expenditures," the report commented. All * * * factors combined indicate a grand total of expenditures of nearly $11,000,000,000."

Expenditures Give Pause.

"To this staggering amount must be added the heavy expenditures of States and their local subdivisions, now approaching $10,000,000,000. Those in authority should consider well whether the country can sustain such a volume of expenditures."

Clausen deplored the tendency of Government spending to "destroy on the part of the people the prudent attitude toward public money which is necessary to keep Government expenditures within reasonable bounds."

He added:

"Special interest groups are insistently demanding Government gratuities. The will of the public to resist these demands has been weakened. The situation is demoralizing."

In reporting the $878,751,903 independent offices bill yesterday, the Senate Appropriations Committee authorized Senator Byrnes to explore the necessity of appropriating funds at this time to pay into the United States life insurance fund $507,000,000 borrowed for veterans' loans.

Budget as Amendment.

Byrnes, following his study, will offer the bonus budget as an amendment to the bill. The committee included in the deficiency bill $5,500,000 for the Veterans' Administration and $6,678,000 for the Treasury, to pay the respective costs of administering the "baby bond" bonus.

Senator B. denied that the Senate committee's swift action was primarily designed to block the House expanionist drive. But Patman declared the House group is prepared to resist what he called "parliamentary trickery."

House inflation strategy may be to force the old Patman bonus bill out of committee, and attach to it a bill by Representative James G. Scrugham, of Nevada, to issue notes against so-called free gold and silver in the Treasury. Treasury spokesmen said there is little more than $500,000,000 of "free gold," however.

Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, co-author of the $3,000,000,000 inflationary farm mortgage refinancing bill, welcomed proposals that the Patmanites join forces with this group. A petition on the Frazier-Lemke bill already has 213 signatures, and needs only 218 to force a vote. One House leader pointed out that the bonus and farm inflation blocs comprised almost the same personnel, so overmuch importance need not be attached to the union of the two.

Standing at Crossroads.

Patman told reporters on the eve of today's inflation conference:

"We are at the crossroads. We are going to decide which fork we will take—the one which will provide for the issuance of more bonds and imposition of new taxes as tribute to bankers for the use of Government credit, or whether we will use, within safe limitations, the gold and silver in the Treasury as a basis to save the people that much taxes."

The President, at his White House press conference yesterday, said plans for including bonus taxes in the proposed new revenue bill are still under study, with no decisions made. He said proposals for revenue to finance the farm program should not be considered as additional taxes, because they would merely replace AAA processing levies invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Awalt Resigns Treasury Post After 16 Years

Senior Deputy Comptroller to Practice Law With Thomas Hewes.

By the Associated Press.

The ranks of long-time officials at the Treasury were thinned further yesterday with the resignation of F. G. Awalt, senior Deputy Comptroller of the Currency, who, as Acting Comptroller, helped guide national bank destinies during the dark days of the banking holiday.

Awalt will leave on February 15, after 16 years of service, to reenter the private practice of law with Thomas Hewes, who also held a high Treasury position early in the Roosevelt Administraiton—that of Assistant Secretary. Hewes quit after being relieved of most of his duties when Secretary Morgenthau succeeded the late William H. Woodin.

President Roosevelt, Morgenthau and J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, praised Awalt in letters to him.

Took Office in 1930.

Awalt came to the Treasury in 1920, first serving under Secretary Houston in a legal capacity on the war-loan staff. In 1927 he became Second Deputy Comptroller and counsel, being elevated to the first deputyship and counsel on December 1, 1928. He served as Acting Comptroller from September, 1932, following the resignation of John W. Pole, until April, 1933.

Mr. Roosevelt wrote Awalt:

"Naturally I am best acquainted with the remarkably wise and competent manner in which you carried on the duties of acting comptroller in the heart of the banking crisis in the early days of my Administration and with the fine assistance that you have given to Secretaries Woodin and Morgenthau and to Comptroller O'Connor since then. For this great service you deserve and you have my most sincere gratitude and you deserve also the gratitude of the Nation."

Resignation One of Series.

His resignation is one of a series under the present Administration. Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, money counselor; Dean Acheson, undersecretary; Lewis Douglas, director of the budget, and recently Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, quit because they differed with Administration policies.

Great Choir At Cathedral Is Reopened

Canon Phelps to Speak in Morning, Bishop in Afternoon.

The Great Choir at Washington Cathedral, which has been closed since last summer for installation of the "Ter Sanctus" reredos, stone screen behind the high altar, will be open to worshipers tomorrow.

Canon Anson Phelps Stokes will deliver the sermon at the service of Holy Communion at 11 a. m., and the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington, will preach at the choral evensong at 4 p. m. Music for both services will be furnished by the Cathedral choir of men and boys, directed by Robert G. Barrow.

Services for the day will begin with celebration of the Holy Communion in Bethlehem Chapel at 7:30 a. m. According to the church calendar, the "Feast of the Presentation in the Temple" will be observed tomorrow.

Bishop Freeman has announced that the annual patriotic service for the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy will be held in the Great Choir the afternoon of February 16. The Midshipmen's Choir from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis will sing.

The Rev. Everett H. Jones, B. D., rector of St. Paul's Church, Waco, Tex., will be special preacher tomorrow night in St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square. Giving the second of a series of lectures on "Immortality," the Rev. Mr. Jones will preach on "What Is the Christian View of Death?"

The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., St. John's rector, will preach on "Fellowship" at the 11 a. m. service.

Rock Creek Parish. The Rev. F. J. Bohanan, D. D., rector. The Senior Young People's Fellowship will present an illustrated lecture on the great Antioch Chalice at 7 p. m. tomorrow in the parish hall. The chalice, discovered at Antioch, Syria, in 1910, has been an object of great interest throughout the Christian world. The church school is co-operating in presentation of the lecture.

The rector will celebrate Holy Communion at 8:30 and 11 a. m., preaching at the latter service.

At Holy Comforter Chapel, 5714 Georgia avenue, the Rev. William L. Mayo, minister in charge, will conduct Holy Communion at 7:30 and 11 a. m., preaching at the latter. He will give another address at 7:30 p. m. prayer service.

Trinity Episcopal Church, Takoma Park, Md. The Rev. Reno S. Harp, jr., rector. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will be the principal speaker at a parish dinner Thursday. The affair will inaugurate the church's building fund drive. Carl A. Hoglund, chairman of the building committee, also will speak.

Transfiguration Episcopal Church. The Rev. John J. Quealy, rector. Canon Freeland Peter will be special speaker at 11 a. m. services tomorrow. Other services will be at 7:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. The rector will officiate.

All Saints' Episcopal Church, The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, rector. The subject of the rector's 11 a. m. Communion sermon will be "God Imminent." Communion will also be celebrated at 7:30 a. m.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee, will speak at the men's dinner Tuesday night.

Chapel of the Redeemer, Glen Echo. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 9:30 a. m. The Rev. M. M. Perkins will preach.

St. Luke's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Josiah E. Elliott, rector. A choral celebration of Holy Communion will feature the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. There will also be an early celebration at 7 a. m. The rector will give an address at 8 p. m. candlemas services.

St. Andrew's Episcopal Church. The Rev. A. J. Wilder, rector. The Festival of the Purification of the Virgin Mary will be kept with Holy Communion at 8 a. m. The rector will preach on "Partial Vistas of God" at 11 o'clock.

Scientist Churches' Sermon Announced

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from I John 3:18: "My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." (Romans 13:10).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Love inspires, illumines, designates and leads the way. Right motives give pinions to thought, and strength and freedom to speech and action."

Synagogue Services Dedicated to Parley

Services in local synagogues are being dedicated to the national conference for Palestine which convenes here Monday. Sir Herbert Samuel, first high commissioner of Palestine; Simon Marks and Lord Bearsted—all distinguished Englishmen interested in the conference activities—will be guests of honor at a banquet Monday night in the Willard Hotel.

C. N. Howard to Speak.

Relief Inquiry Group Defends Critical Report

Garett County Committee Assails 'Feeble Attempt' to Justify Costs.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., Jan. 31.—The Garrett County relief investigation committee today referred to what it called a "feeble attempt" to justify the necessity of spending $1,770 in order to distribute $4,370 in a statement defending its findings.

The committee recently criticized the county welfare board and Relief Administration. The board then replied to the criticism, saying the committee had not reported to the county commissioners and had not visited all relief clients. State Senator Clifford Friend is chairman of the investigating committee.

The committee's statement issued today said:

"From the beginning we realized that any report * * * critical of the administration of relief in our county would not be favorably received by the chairman and executive secretary of the county welfare board. * * * We now find ourselves confronted with a determination on the part of some members of the board to disregard these findings, notwithstanding the fact that we visited every one of the 55 families reported on.

"When the committee stated in our general report that there were farms growing into weeds because the families living on them are receiving relief we meant just that. We are farmers ourselves. We are familiar with the possibilities on those farms. We know that when a farmer fails to plow and sow grains, when he does not produce hay, when his barns are empty, and when he does not keep any horses or mules for power, that his farm is going to waste. * * *"

"We believe that the feeble attempt that Charles W. Ream, chairman, and the executive secretary have made to justify the tremendous cost of relief in this county is not satisfying to the general public. It is indeed hard to justify the necessity for spending $1,770 in order to distribute $3,370."

Marriage, Divorce Subject of Series

With a discussion of marriage and divorce, the young people's group of the First Congregational Church will begin a new series of programs tomorrow night.

The series will cover some of the problems facing young men and women. Among the topics are included. "Finding a Job," "Recreation," "G-Men and the Problem of Crime," "Who is a Good Citizen?" and "The Achievement of Mental Health."

Gleaming Equipment of the Modern Kitchen Combines a High Degree of Beauty, Utility

Pans Are Now Light to Lift, Easy to Clean

Egg-Poaching Unit Boasts Other Uses; New Dutch Oven Recommended.

BEAUTY has entered the kitchen. You will agree that the kitchen of today, with its gleaming mechanical refrigerator, modern range, built-in units, electric mixers, etc., is a far cry from the kitchen of a few years ago. No woman who has all of these modern conveniences would willingly part with them and return to the coal-burning stove or the ordinary ice chest. Though the old-fashioned kitchen had an air of romance that the up-to-date one has not been able to capture, the modern kitchen is a perfect combination of beauty and practicality. Cooking utensils as well as equipment are very different from those used by our grandmothers, or even our mothers.

Pots and pans are no longer heavy to lift or hard to clean. Women must have had a hand in designing the latest metal pans, for they are streamlined, smart, and what is the most important, they give perfect cooking results.

Take the latest in egg-poaching pans, for example. Egg-poaching etiquette is something that every housewife must thoroughly understand before she can turn out a perfect example. Dieticians tell us that the secret of a perfect poached egg is in the steaming. No sooner said than done—a new egg-poaching pan appears on the market, one that will assure a perfect poached egg with little or no effort. Your egg will be soft throughout, but firm enough to be lifted from the pan to a slice of buttered toast, without breaking the yolk or losing any part of the albumen when you use the new handy egg poacher illustrated.

More Than One Use.

Would you buy a whole poaching array, just to satisfy your family's demand for perfect poached eggs? You may have long ago, but not any more, for this marvel of new pans features more than one use. The bottom section gives you a handy saucepan of the newest style, with streamline handle, smooth flat bottom, and easily cleaned, rounded corners. Any woman who purchases one will find it worth its weight in gold.

Of course you remember the old-fashioned Dutch oven—that great smoke-blackened pot so heavy that it took more than one person to lift it from the stove. It was an excellent cooking vessel, of course, but hard to handle and difficult to clean. Now we have the most up-to-date and practical version of the Dutch oven. It is made of shining alluminum, and there is no reason in the world why it shouldn't always remain clean as a whistle.

The new Dutch oven looks like a deep frying pan, but its thick surface makes it ideal for foods that need long, slow cooking. It has a drip-drop cover, to keep food juicy and tender. The non-skid handle of the pan makes it easy to lift back and forth, and the cover is also convenient to remove because of its unusually large knob.

Pan Recommended.

This pan is especially recommended for such dishes as Swiss steak, fried chicken and other foods that need slow cooking or simmering. It can be used, however, very successfully as an ordinary frying pan.

Buy a new Dutch oven and treat your family to the best fried chicken that you have ever eaten. Cook it in your new pan as follows: Use chickens about 1½ pounds dressed weight, allowing one-half chicken per person. Singe, remove pin feathers, clean and split. Rinse in cold water. Dry slightly, but leave enough water on the surface to permit a dredging of flour mixing with salt and pepper to adhere to the surface. Melt fat or butter, put in chicken, and cook with moderate heat until well browned. Cover, turn heat low and continue cooking until meat is tender, almost ready to fall from the bone. After the chicken is tender, remove to a hot platter and keep in the warming ovem until you have prepared a smooth, creamy white gravy from the juice in the bottom of the pan. Use milk and enough flour mixed to a smooth paste, with more cold milk to thicken the gravy.

Try Hot Crab Flakes With Tomato Jelly

If you are wondering what to serve for your next bridge luncheon, why not try crab flakes with tomato jelly? You might serve a hot consomme first, then the crab and tomato jelly with plenty of hot cheese biscuits, a French pastry and coffee.

To prepare the main dish, first make a highly spiced and seasoned tomato jelly and pour into small timbale molds. Chill well. When ready to serve, turn out on individual plates, decorate with a sprig of cress, and at the base surrounding mold, place a circle of hot crab flakes, prepared as follows:

Pick over, carefully, fresh crab flakes and toss them in butter until well heated. Do not stir enough to break flakes. Season with salt, pepper, tabasco and sherry wine.

Meat Servings Vary.

The amount of meat to buy per person varies widely with the cut and the way of cooking. In general, 1-3 to ½ pound as bought be enough cooked meat for each person when there is very little bone, but the amount of waste must be taken into account. One pound of meat without waste yields about 2 cups of cooked, diced meat.

Culbertson On Bridge

The bidding of a hand at contract resembles nothing so much as a serial story—"to be continued in our next." When there are many bids, which is to say, repeated exchange of information, no one message should be interpreted singly, but always in its relation to the other messages. Thus, necessarily disjointed parts can be smoothed into one harmonious whole. Ambiguities may be clarified; exaggeration modified to plain, unvarnished truth.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	2 hearts	4 spades	Pass
5 diamonds	Pass	5 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

The crux of this bidding was North's proper refusal to allow his partner's slam try—the five diamond bid—to make him unduly optimistic. While it was true that North had not overbid in jumping to game, and also true that he held the ace about which his partner obviously was asking, it was equally true that South had had the opportunity of using the 4-5 no-trump convention and had failed to do so. There could be only one reason—he hadn't the necessary requirements. There must, therefore, be either two aces, or an ace and a king "off the hand." North's five-spade sign-off held the contract to a safe level.

Fennel as Appetizer.

Fennel is much appreciated by Italians, who use it mostly in salads, although sometimes they cook it. Its pungent flavor is not liked by all Americans, although many enjoy it. Used as celery, trimmed, crisped and served on cracked ice, it makes a delicious appetizer.

Novel Sandwiches Add Zest to Bridge

Many bridge foursomes limit their luncheon menus to sandwiches, coffee and a sweet. The competition between hostesses in giving each other a taste and eye thrill when the sandwiches come in becomes a game in itself. Here's a sandwich suggestion that "has everything" in more ways than one. Keep it tucked in your memory for some prize-winning bridge luncheon. It will serve two tables.

Cut the crust from the sides of a loaf of white bread. Slice into three slices, lengthwise, and butter them. Spread one slice with crab meat salad and cover with the second slice. On that spread egg salad and cover with the third slice. On this spread chopped olives mixed with mayonnaise dressing. Now cover the entire loaf with an icing made of cream cheese, mixed with cream to spread. Sprinkle over with chopped nuts and serve on a bed of lettuce. Slice at the table with a very sharp knife.

Make several hours in advance and let stand in the refrigerator so ingredients will blend.

Olives stuffed with foie gras may be prepared as follows: Select large green olives and remove stones with an olive stoner. Fill with puree of foie gras. These are excellent with cocktails.

SWISS CHARD with its white succulent stalks and its deep, luxuriant green of the moss-curled leaves, makes an attractive table decoration as well as a delicious food.

A product popular during the winter season, it is particularly good served raw in salads or cooked as a vegetable and served with melted butter, or as an appetizing main dish with cheese, as suggested in the accompanying photograph.

Like many other leafy vegetables, including spinach, kale, cabbage, beet greens, turnip tops and lettuce, it is valuable chiefly for its minerals and vitamins and for the bulk it adds to diets. Served raw, it reaches the table as attractive as it appears growing in the garden. When properly cooked, it is delicately pleasing to appetites.

Cook Stalk, Leaves.

The stalks and leaves may be combined for serving, or the mid-ribs, which are very broad, may be cut off and cooked like asparagus. The illustration shows them cooked until tender, seasoned and served with a delicious cheese sauce. The piquant flavor of cheese is particularly pleasing with the bland flavor of the chard. The cheese sauce, made with milk and butter, and served with chard on strips of toast makes a substantial main dish. For a still more substantial meal add broiled bacon strips or sausage links, hot muffins and a rather filling dessert such as individual fruit pies or fresh fruit with cream and cake.

Wash and strip leafy tissue from the chard stalks. Trim mid-ribs neatly and shape like asparagus spears, if desired. Place in saucepan, cover with boiling water and add about 1 teaspoon of salt for each quart of water. Boil rapidly until tender, about 10 minutes. Drain off water and add enough butter to coat each stalk. Arrange in serving dish and serve with a cheese sauce.

Cheese Added.

Most persons like to serve Swiss chard stalks like they do asparagus on strips of buttered toast, cut in halves lengthwise. To make the cheese sauce, prepare white sauce in a double boiler with flour, butter, milk and salt, cooking until smooth and creamy with constant stirring. Remove from heat, add cheese and beat until cheese is entirely melted.

Swiss Chard With Cheese Sauce.

Mid-ribs from 3 medium bunches of Swiss chard
4 tablespoons flour
4 tablespoons butter
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup grated cheese.

Chard au gratin is equally popular. Break stalks into 2-inch lengths and cook in boiling salted water until tender, 10 to 20 minutes. Allow ½ to 1 cup of white sauce for each cup of chard, and from 1 to 2 tablespoons of buttered crumbs per serving. Arrange the cooked chard and the sauce in layers in a buttered baking dish; cover with buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) 10 to 20 minutes or until food is hot and crumbs are brown. Grated cheese, minced onion, minced parsley and other seasonings may be combined with this dish.

Cook the tops by placing the washed leaves in a deep kettle, cover and cook over low heat until the leaves are tender. Removing the stems from the chard cuts the cooking time in about half. Drain off any liquid, chop and season with salt and butter. Turn into serving dish and garnish with wedge-shaped sections of lemon or sliced hard cooked eggs.

Broccoli stalks are also delicious served au gratin or on toast with cheese sauce as suggested above.

Glycerin Plays Important Role

Studies Are Being Made to Adapt Commercial Uses to Home Cooking.

FEW products have made such rapid strides in the domain of foodstuffs as glycerin. Yet, surprisingly, the average housewife knows very little about this important culinary adjunct or how frequently it occurs on her pantry shelves.

The role of glycerin in commercially prepared foodstuffs, already a considerable one, grows every year. Certain manufacturers of confectionery, meat extracts, fruit preserves and frozen desserts, to name only a few, avail themselves of this wholesome natural product as a preservative.

Many bakeries here and abroad use it to make good cakes better. It enters into numerous essences and sirups and flavoring extracts. According to one manufacturer, "glycerin tends to distribute the vanilla more evenly and more economically throughout the cake."

That actual test kitchen work is now being launched in New York City to adapt for home cookery these many commercially utilized advantages of glycerin—and uncover new ones—is good news for housewives.

Recipes will be developed to add pleasant variety to the daily menu or cut corners on the food budget without risk of health. Of course, too, every home has its own favorite recipes. The new test kitchen proposes to work out the exact proportions in which the positive advantages of glycerine can be added to secure the best results in relation to the other ingredients.

Just in case you didn't know, glycerin is a clear sirupy liquid, colorless and practically odorless, with a slightly sweet taste. This gives it its name, from the Greek word "glykeros," meaning sweet.

Cheese Sauce Heightens Flavor of Swiss Chard

Swiss chard may be served in many delightful ways, but one of the most appealing to the appetite is boiled chard mid-ribs or stems cut to form pieces the shape and size of asparagus tips. These are cooked until tender in boiled water, then coated with butter and served atop toast slices smothered with cheese sauce.

Golden Toasted Sandwiches Add Variety to Menu

Many Pleasing Combinations of Fillings Will Delight Child at Luncheons.

TOASTED sandwiches make a pleasing addition to the many foods already on the list of easily prepared and attractive luncheon dishes for the school child who eats his noon meal at home.

Hot golden slices of toast may be spread with any of the following combinations of ingredients. Peanut butter worked to a smooth spreading consistency with a little cooked salad dressing is delicious as a filling when mixed with crumbled crisp bacon. Lettuce is also an attractive addition to the peanut bacon filling, and whole wheat toast is an ideal selection of bread for this type of filling.

Hard-cooked eggs, chopped and mixed with a little mayonnaise, make a pleasing filling when combined with chopped red pimento, crumbled crisp bacon, minced parsley, chopped pickles or stuffed olives, or finely minced celery.

Left-over meats, put through the food chopper and mixed with mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing, are excellent fillings for toasted sandwiches. Ham is good with chopped sweet pickle or chopped stuffed olives. Chicken and celery make a good combination. Left-over roast pork may be used without grinding, the meat being spread with a layer of apple sauce.

Cheese Fillings.

Soft white cream cheese may be combined with a number of ingredients to make an attractive filling for toasted bread. Marmalade and two thin slices of toasted brown cream cheese are delicious between bread or raisin bread. Cream cheese and chopped sweet, pickle, olives, or pickle relish makes an excellent combination between toasted whole wheat slices. Ground dates, nuts, figs or dried apricots may also be added to the cheese.

There are a number of other types of cheese that will find favor with the children when served in sandwich form. Of the spreads you will find the pimento cream, pineapple cream and relish cream the most popular. Mild Swiss, block pimento and yellow cream or cheddar are among the solid cheeses that the children will enjoy.

Fish and Vegetables.

Flaked fish, especially white fish, salmon and tuna, mixed with finely chopped celery and a bit of sweet pickle or olive, then moistened with a cooked mustard flavored dressing, also makes a tempting filling.

Grated carrot and shredded cabbage or lettuce sandwiches may be served to the younger children. This mixture of grated raw vegetables will be more palatable if moistened with a cooked salad dressing. Carrots mixed with seedless raisins makes a delicious filling for slices of toasted brown bread.

Nippy Cheese Sandwich Filling.

2 cups strained canned tomatoes (juce and pulp)
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon mustard
2½ cups (½ pound) grated cheese
1¼ cups (¼ pound) dried beef, finely ground
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Bring tomatoes to a boil, using top of double boiler; add dry ingredients and bring to brisk boil, stirring constantly. Place over rapidly boiling water, cook 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add cheese gradually and stir until melted. Add beef and sauce. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools. Makes 2½ cups sandwich filling.

Pirate Party and Treasure Hunt Is Real Fun for Junior's Friends

By Dorothea Duncan.

PIRATES ARE stalking the earth. Black patches cover bright eyes, ragged trousers, bright coats, dusty boots are scurrying from attic to basement in search of treasure. Lights are dim, corners shadowy and mystery haunts the air. It is party time for all the young scallywags in the neighborhood, and the event may be Junior's eighth or tenth birthday, or perhaps it isn't a birthday celebration at all, but just an excuse for a party for the youngsters.

It must be a costume affair naturally and the setting must be in keeping with the theme of the occasion. A play room, an attic if it is heated, or a recreation room are ideal spots to hold a gathering of the clan. Old trunks or boxes covered with rugs, bright cretonne, or shawls will make the setting look authenic. The lights should be dim, and the shadows many. Burning candles set in old bottles will cast ghostly lights that make the little costumed figures grotesque enough to appeal to stout boyish hearts. The lighted candles, however, should be placed high out of reach for safety's sake.

youthful guest should be given a map of the house (the desert island). Let the trail lead them on until everyone is warm and then suddenly let the trail come to an end. After that it is every man for himself and he who finds the treasure is winner of the prize. The prize may be anything that will appeal to young boyish minds. It may be a copy of "Robinson Crusoe" or Stevenson's "Treasure Island."

There must be food, of course, and in keeping with the pirate idea, too. Rather than disturb the peaceful tranquility of the dining room, plan to serve the refreshments in the room where the party activity is at its height. Have mesh bags of gold paper cover chocolate money for favors. Cake made in a huge loaf pan and frosted with drifts of white icing with chocolate border to resemble iron trunk bands around the sides may be part of the dessert. Each slice of cake, and it should be cut by the host with a miniature sword, should hold some trophy of the party. You might buy a package of wedding cake favors, boil them up, and add them to the cake batter, so that each youth will find treasure in his slice of cake.

Serve lusty toasted sandwiches of lettuce, tomatoes and bacon first with chocolate milk in tin or paper cups. Then follow this with the cake and a real seafaring dessert.

Why not let a fleet of gelatin ships accompany the cake. The children will love them and they will be easy to make. Mold lime flavored gelatin in scone shaped glass sherbets. Fill about two-thirds full and let the mixture harden. One package will be sufficient for six glasses. Then dissolve a package of lime flavored gelatin in 2 cups of warm water and when it becomes cold and sirupy whip it with a rotary egg beater until it will stand up in peaks like whipped cream. Drop some of this mixture over each firm glass of plain gelatin.

Just before serving add the final touch. On each mound of whipped gelatin lay a slice of canned peach cut boat shaped. Cut small triangular paper sails of paper and insert one sail in each peach boat with a toothpick.

Two Distinct Types Of Artichokes Sold

Artichokes are of two very different types: Jerusalem artichokes, which resemble potatoes in appearance, but with a distinctive taste, and French artichokes or globe artichokes, which are really flower buds, with green petal like leaves attached to a bottom or center and so curved over one another that they give the artichoke an almost round shape.

When selecting French artichokes be sure that they are green in color. A brownish color suggests that they have been kept overlong. These artichokes are sold by the unit, and two medium sized artichokes weigh about 1 pound. There are about 5 medium Jerusalem artichokes to a pound.

A pound of Jerusalem artichokes serve three to four. Large French artichokes may be halved and used to serve two persons, but it is customary to allow one per person.

Angel Strips Dress-up Dish For February

Delicacy Is Welcome Addition to Both Holiday and Everyday Menu.

WHAT with three special days in February we must look to party days and sensible family meals as well. And who will not applaud if both can be combined. Too often, perhaps, we forget that the family will welcome a dress-up dish. They will glow under the subtle compliment you are paying them. Give them a chance to pass approval on a dish before it appears on the company menu.

Angel strips so easily made that they fit comfortably in many a menu is especially desirable for a Lincoln Day and may be dubbed Lincoln log slices in your menu.

To make the slices mix up your favorite angel food cake recipe. If you don't have one, the following will make a cake large enough for 12 to 14 servings.

Standard Angel Food Cake.

1 cup egg whites (8 to 10 whites)
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
½ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon vanilla
1¼ cups sugar
1 cup pastry flour

Sift one-fourth cup sugar four times with the flour. Beat egg whites, cream of tartar, vanilla and salt to a stiff foam. Fold or cut in the one cup of sugar, about two tablespoons at a time. Fold in the flour-mixture, folding it in only until no dry flour is visible. Bake 325 degrees Fahrenheit (slow oven) in a tube pan for one hour. Let the cake "hang" in the pan for at least one hour or until cool. When cool, split it into four or five layers. The filling between the "logs" is prepared as follows:

4 squares bitter chocolate
2 cups milk
¾ cup sugar
5 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon flavoring
1 cup or more of chopped nut meats.

Note: May use 1 cup water and 1 cup evaporated milk, if preferred.

Place the chocolate and I cup of the milk (or water) over hot water to melt. Meanwhile mix sugar, flour and salt thoroughly. Stir in the remaining cup of milk. Add to chocolate mixture, stirring constantly until thickened. Cover and cook about 5 to 8 minutes. Add butter, and cool. Add flavoring and nuts. Then spread between layers. Ice the cake with creamy chocolate icing made by melting one tablespoon of butter in the top of a double boiler; adding and mixing thoroughly one cup sifted confectioner's sugar and one-quarter cup milk when the butter is melted; letting the mixture stand over the hot water five minutes; removing from heat and adding one beaten egg (or two yolks), one-half teaspoon vanilla and two squares unsweetened chocolate, melted. Set this mixture in a pan of very cold water or cracked ice and beat with a rotary egg beater until proper consistency for spreading. Finely chopped pistachio nuts or chocolate shot may be sprinkled unevely over the surface. Chill for two hours or longer before serving. Slicing is made easier by dipping the knife in water.

Sauces Make A Fine Dessert Of Ice Cream

ICE CREAM with sauce is a dessert that is truly American. Here are three recipes for sauce that will find favor with members of your family. They are easy to make and attractive when served. Each sauce can be served with vanilla ice cream, or it may be used to top other ice creams when the flavor of the sauce will blend or enhance the flavor of the ice cream.

Serve this chocolate sauce on vanilla or nut ice creams or with chocolate ice cream if you want an especially rich dessert. For the chocolate sauce: Melt one square (1 ounce) of chocolate over hot water. Add one cup of sugar and mix well. Then add one-half cup of sweet light cream slowly. Cook together over a slow flame for ten minutes. Serve hot or cold, as desired.

Butterscotch sauce is second in popularity only to the chocolate sauce and can be served atop a scoop of vanila, nut, chocolate or butterscotch ice cream. Prepare it as follows:

Put one and one-quarter cups brown sugar, two-thirds cup corn sirup and four tablespoons butter in a saucepan. Bring to boiling point and let boil until soft ball may be formed when tried in cold water, then add three-quarters cup light cream.

The light cream is no thicker than the milk that is poured off the top of a quart bottle, and the two recipes above are therefore not as rich or as expensive as they sound.

Marshmallow sauce is another favorite, for it can be served with fruited, as well as vanilla, chocolate or nut ice creams. To make: mix two tablespoons orange juice with one-quarter cup marshmallow topping. If too thin, add more marshmallow. Serve cold.

Six-Layer Dinner Recipe Suggested

2 cups raw sliced potatoes
¾ cup uncooked rice
1 cup sliced raw onions
2 cups raw hamburg steak
1 small can tomatoes or canned tomato soup
1 large green pepper (sliced)

Place in layers in order given in a greased casserole, seasoning with salt and pepper. Bake in a slow oven about 2½ hours with cover on. Add a little boiling water if too dry.

Whole Strawberries Bring Spring to Menus

Whole strawberries on green leaves make a spring like addition to winter menus. They may be served as an appetizer or for dessert with cake.

Arrange a few green leaves in the center of each plate; these may be glax leaves to form a background. Form confectioners' sugar into small mounds, by molding it in small cordial glasses and turning out in center of plate. Around the sugar set five or six large, fancy strawberries with hulls on, but perfectly cleaned.

Seafood Cocktail.

Clam juice and tomato juice, half and half, make a delicious cocktail with which to begin a sea-food dinner.

Avocado Use In Cream-Nog Recommended

Dish Called Appropriate for Convalescents, Well Alike.

IT might be justly said that too little attention is paid to the subject of convalescent cookery and too much is given over to those healthy persons whose normal appetites will at least see that they are fed.

Avocado cream-nog is exceptionally appropriate for the convalescing patient who has grown tired of milk, but it has qualities which will recommend it for other persons as well. The child or adult who will not drink milk undisguised may succumb to a tall glass of avocado cream-nog. It will be a special treat, too, for the midnight prowler, that is, if there are avocados on the refrigerator shelves and ice cream in the freezing unit, for it is a beverage that is easy to digest.

Avocado Cream-Nog.

4 tablespoons avocado pulp
½ cup vanilla ice cream
¾ cup whole milk
Few grains salt

To prepare avocado pulp, cut an avocado into halves, remove seed and peel. Force fruit through a sieve to obtain desired amount. Blend ice cream and avocado with electric mixture, using low speed, or with rotary egg beater by hand. Gradually add milk, then salt and blend well. Amount serves two.

THIS NATURAL FOOD GENTLY REGULATES YOUR SYSTEM

Furnishes Needed "Bulk" for Regular Habits

Your doctor will tell you that keeping healthy depends far more on proper diet than on drugs, that common constipation is usually due to insufficient "bulk" in meals, and that patent medicines give you only temporary relief.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies gently acting "bulk" which corrects the cause of common constipation.* This "bulk" takes up moisture, forming a soft mass which helps to cleanse the system.

ALL-BRAN gives your body the regular internal exercise it needs to prevent sluggishness. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

Studies on normal men and women have shown that this delicious cereal is perfectly satisfactory. Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity, with milk or cream—or use in cooking.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Consult your doctor if you do not gain relief this way. ALL-BRAN is much more effective than part-bran products. Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Arlington Class Of 13 Graduates At High School

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar 500. Clarendon, Va.

Graduating exercises of Washington-Lee High School were held last night in the school auditorium. More than 500 persons saw the class of 13 receive diplomas.

The exercises opened with invocation by the Rev. Walter Wolf, pastor of the Arlington Presbyterian Church followed by an address of welcome by Mrs. Ruby Simpson, of the county school board.

Dr. Lyle W. Ashby, director of public instruction, National Education Association, addressed the class on "Youth Faces the Future." He urged: "Do not stop where you are, but continue on with your studies that you may better cope with the problems of the world."

Building operations in Arlington County during January showed a marked increase over last year, according to records in the office of the county manager. There were 42 permits issued for new homes representing an outlay of $192,325.

In January, 1935, 17 permits were issued for new homes, representing an expenditure of $69,550, and 4 for business, costing $5,000, making a total of $75,550. During the same period in 1934 7 permits were issued for new houses, representing an outlay of $37,350, and 3 for business with an outlay of $11,400, making a total of $48,750.

Reports for contractors in the county indicate new construction will exceed the record mark of last year, which was $5,780,191.78, representing $5,552,611.78 for 698 new homes and $227,580 for construction of 57 business enterprises.

Clarence M. Yeatman, newly elected noble grand of Arlington Lodge, No. 193, announces appointment of the following standing committees:

Finance, Harvey Marcey, chairman; Norbert Melick and J. W. Myers; by-laws, H. W. Beattie, chairman; William L. Bragg and E. W. Newman; delinquent, J. W. Myers, chairman; Dan Johnson and E. Alexander; bulletin, Norbert Melnick, chairman; instructions, Walter B. Huffman, chairman, and E. W. Newman; memorial, B. W. Chamberlin, chairman, and Walter E. Huffman; refreshments, H. C. Messner.

Clemency Is Asked For a Prison Hero

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—Maryland prison officials today asked Gov. Harry W. Nice to show executive clemency to a negro prisoner who disarmed another prisoner running amuck with a knife.

The Board of Welfare made the plea on behalf of Rames Sallee, a prisoner at the House of Correction. The board asked the Governor to consider a reduction of sentence, parole or a pardon. Sallee overpowered Charles Rodgers, Negro prisoner, after Rogers had severely cut two other prisoners.

Beauty Contest Is Won By Miss Mary Denny

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boyce, Va., Jan. 31.—From more than two score competitors, Miss Mary Denny has been declared winner of the annual beauty contest held here under the auspices of Boyce Agricultural High School.

Miss Denny is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph S. Denny and the late Mr. Denny, one-time member of the Virginia State Senate. She was presented a trophy by Miss Virginia Jacobs, who was "Miss Boyce of 1934." Miss Ann Meade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Meade, was awarded second prize. Miss Jane Joliffe was mistress of ceremonies.

'Uncle Phil' Edelin, Ex-Slave, Leaves Estate to 2 Daughters

The will of William P. Edelin, a former slave, who died at his home in Silver Spring last week at the age of 104, was admitted to probate yesterday in the Montgomery County Orphans Court. It left the entire estate to his two daughters, Mrs. Mary Potts and Mrs. Carrie Moles.

Edelin, known affectionately in the county as "Uncle Phil," was born in Charles County, Md., in 1831. He was a slave during most of his early life, but gained his freedom in time to enlist in the Union Army during the Civil War. He fought at the first battle of Bull Run with the late Richard H. Hewitt, father of Capt. Frank L. Hewitt and Joseph T. Hewitt, of Silver Spring.

He was a member of the Mount Zion Methodist Church for more than 55 years, where he served as class leader, steward and trustee. He was active also in numerous civic endeavors of the colored race.

In addition to the two daughters he is survived by a son, John Edelin, eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. At his death he was thought to have been the oldest living resident of Maryland.

On the Air Today

EDDIE CANTOR'S pal Jimmy was in town for the President's Ball, a disgustingly healthy appearing Wallington who was looking forward Thursday afternoon to having the most fun of all the 10,000 at the evening's festivities.

In case you missed him in your round of the hotels, he is sans mustache. It makes a difference. Specifically, it robs him of a few years of age. Jimmy Wallington, at ease in the WRC studios, looked more like a George Washington gridiron star than America's ace announcer.

Not that announcers shouldn't look youthful and full of undergraduate vigor—but a fair share of the listening audience takes its announcers as seriously as its "big names" of the stage. And Jimmy Wallington just doesn't look as mature as his partner, Cantor.

Wallington has a priceless sense of humor and his story of last fall's trip to Los Angeles by steamship, in which he left the ship at Guatemala City to complete the trip by plane due to a sudden change in the opening date for Cantor's new air series, marked him as one of those rare persons who enjoys a funny story—on himself.

Jimmy obtained $200 from the boat's purser, giving no particular thought to where Guatemala might be or how far he would have to travel by plane. As he said, he had been on the water for days, and by comparison with a train trip 'cross country, he wasn't far from California.

The $200 barely paid the plane tariff. In fact he had just $26 left for the rest of his expenses—and two days of travel ahead, including overnight stops. And not a soul at any of the stops who would cash a check for "a strange American."

When he was met by Cantor at Los Angeles, he had one Mexican peso to his name.

Wallington recommends Cantor's new picture "Strike Me Pink" as the best the banjo-eyed comedian has turned out. "I should know," says Jimmy. "I saw every foot of it made."

However, he says he probably will never be seen in a picture with Cantor, because there is nothing he could do as well, in support, as any of numerous actors available in Hollywood. With one exception: If Cantor ever makes a picture with a radio background, it would be in the bag for him.

A picture for Wallington himself? That's another matter. And it probably will come off before very long.

Old-Fashioned Cherry Recipes Appropriate

Time-Tested Favorites Have Strong Appeal; Suggestions Listed.

IN CHOOSING cherry recipes to use featuring George Washington's birthday, it seems more in keeping with the colonial times to select those with an old-fashioned ring to them. After all, old favorites have stood the test of time, and always have a strong appeal to the masculine person as well as feminine. The canned sour red cherries can be used for these recipes.

Nothing is better than a deep dish cherry pie, one with lots of cherries and juice, and just a thin, tender crust over the top. A mellow, rich, hard sauce is especially good to serve on this if the pie is hot.

And cherry Betty, like an apple Betty, only with cherries for the fruit, and the cherry juice for the liquid, is really a glorified bread pudding made rich and flavorful with a liberal amount of butter, cherries, juice and bread crumbs. Soft custard blends well as a sauce for this.

Cottage pudding is another old favorite. The pudding is a cake which is not rich, much like a one-egg cake, and the sauce served with it is cherries and juice.

Cherry tapioca pudding would be a good selection too. The pearl style tapioca would be more in keeping with the colonial period, but the granulated, quick cooking type is much more convenient to use.

Shortcake, rich and flaky, served with cherries is hard to surpass for popularity. The canned cherries can be sweetened, and thickened much the same as for cottage pudding.

Cherry Cobbler.

2 cups sifted flour.
4 teaspoons baking powder
4 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or other shortening
2-3 cup milk (about)
3 cups canned red cherries, drained
¾ cup sugar
4 tablespoons flour
1 cup cherry juice

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, sugar and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk gradually until soft dough is formed. Roll two-third of dough one-fourth inch thick on slightly floured board. Fit into square pan, 8x8x2 inches; lining sides well. Combine cherries with mixture of sugar and flour. Turn into lined pan. Pour juice over cherries. Roll remaining one-third of dough to one-fourth inch thickness. With sharp knife make slits to permit escape of steam. Fit over cherries, pressing edges of dough together. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 15 minutes; reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees Fahrenheit) and bake 30 to 35 minutes longer. Serves eight.

Deep-Dish Cherry Tapioca.

1 teaspoon salt
4 cups hot water and cherry juice
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 can of sour red cherries (No. 2 can)

Add tapioca and salt to water and cherry juice and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add lemon juice, sugar mixed with spices, butter and cherries. Pour into greased baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Farenheit) 45 minutes. Serve six to eight.

This is an excellent dessert to use if the rest of the meal is to be oven baked, as the pudding can be baked at the same time as the other foods.

Cherry Sauce.

(For Cottage Pudding)

1 cup sugar
½ cup butter
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup water
½ cup cherry juice

Cream the sugar and the butter, add the cornstarch and the liquid and boil over hot water for five minutes, stirring constantly. Continue cooking for 25 minutes. Cherries may be added during the latter part of the cooking, if desired.

Cherry Shortcake Meringues.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
4 tablespoons shortening
4 egg yolks
¾ cup milk
1½ cups drained cherries
4 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup granulated sugar

Prepare biscuit dough by cutting the fat into the sifted dry ingredients. Mix beaten yolks with the milk and stir into the first mixture to make a soft dough. Roll on slightly floured board about ¼ inch thick. Cut rings with floured cutter. Press 6 or 8 cherries into the center half of the circles. Brush edge with water or milk and cover with another biscuit rings. Press edges together. If cherries are sour, sprinkle 1 teaspoon sugar over each mound. Brush top with fat or milk and bake in a hot oven until well browned. Cool slightly. Cover generously with meringue made of the egg whites, salt and sugar, bringing it well to the edge. Brown in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) about 15 to 18 minutes.

Dr. SAMUEL JOHNSON Loved Gentle TEA

Over a steaming cup of gentle Tea, England's big, awkward literary adventurer often met in witty combat with David Garrick, actor; James Boswell, historian; and other Bohemians of his day.

Times have changed for the better. What a difference in the Tea of Johnson's day . . . and tender fragrant Wilkins Tea . . . selected from the tips of the choicest leaves in all India. Ask your dealer for Wilkins "Orange Pekoe" or "Mixed" . . . as you prefer. They're both Just Wonderful!

Water DOES Make a Difference in Coffee

The glorious flavor of Wilkins Coffee is always uniformly the same. First, Wilkins Coffee is scientifically blended to Washington water. Second, this scientifically controlled "balance" is maintained by ceaseless check-ups in the great Wilkins test laboratory right here in our Washington plant. So why waste time and money on Coffees that disappoint, when you know the matchless full-bodied flavor of Wilkins is "CONTROLLED" . . . always the same? It pays to buy this fine fresh Washington Coffee. It's always Just Wonderful!

Frank Buck, in Person, Gangsterism and Comedy Characterize New Week's Bills

Joseph Calleia Real Star; Pictured Play at Earle; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"EXCLUSIVE STORY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Martin Mooney, adapted to the screen by Michael Fessier, featuring Franchot Tone, Madge Evans, Stuart Erwin and Joseph Calleia, with Robert Barrat, J. Farrell MacDonald, Louise Henry, Wade Boteler, Margaret Irving, Raymond Hatton and J. Carrol Naish. Previewed Tuesday afternoon.

The essential elements of exciting melodramatic entertainment are here in abundance. The ubiquitous business of gangsterism in its many variations, of course, is present and there is a suggestion that the burning of the Morro Castle may have had something to do with the formulation of a plot that concerns all manner of heinous enterprises on the part of a band of social brigands.

The pivotal figure of the play seems at first to be a young newspaperman, impersonated with his customary droll humor by Stuart Erwin, but later on the center of interest shifts to that agile young actor, Franchot Tone, who flashes past the final wire winner over all the rest who have been in the running for the favor of Madge Evans.

There is a great deal in the plot of this play that is sordid, sensational and not too believable. On the other hand, there is a great deal that, while frankly on the side of crusading against crime, packs a terrific punch.

Too Sentimental.

I think I never have seen J. Farrell MacDonald worse than he is in this picture. He goes overwhelmingly sentimental, which he does with as ill grace as the late Will Rogers, from whom whimsy and the gentler emotions were remote.

But then there are the performances of Mr. Erwin, Tone, Miss Evans and Joseph Calleia to offset these minor handicaps. Mr. Calleia turns in a performance that is practically flawless. He has a happy, or unhappy, as the case may be, faculty of being able to convert himself into one of the most obnoxious of the cinema's low-lifers.

Getting back to the plot, if one must, it begins with a simple crusade against one of the less obtrusive of the public menaces and then proceeds to expand itself into a considerable survey of the whole expanse of gangsterism and the evil it can produce.

Author in Jail.

Martin Mooney, author of the story on which this picture is based, is popularly supposed to be languishing in the toils of the law as a result of the revelations which he has made and the sources of which he declines to disclose.

There seems to me to be nothing of such a profoundly important nature in the fabric of this narrative as to warrant any such drastic action. "Exclusice Story" is a yarn that frequently goes haywire as far as the Fourth Estate is concerned, more often stumbles into a complete ineptness of expression, but finally winds up with a burst of melodramatic splendor that ought to put it over with the paying patrons.

On the stage at Loew's Fox this week, the entertainment is supplied by what is termed "Broadway's Hollywood Cabaret Revue."

Lew Parker and His Playmates, just another name for "stooges," head the cast and account for most of the fun, although it is not possible to overlook the performances on the side of life and gayety by Ames and Arno, Edna Janis, Mildred Fenton and Jack Starr.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contributions add to the effectiveness of a bill that may be relied upon for adequate entertainment by all who have a yen for the more crass forms of melodrama and can put up with a small amount of aisininity along with their red-blooded drama.

Earle

"CEILING ZERO." First National picturization of the stage play by Commander Frank Wead, adapted to the screen by the author, featuring Pat O'Brien and James Cagne, with June Travis, Stuart Erwin, Barton MacLane, Isabel Jewell, Garry Owen and Henry Wadsworth. Directed by Howard Hawks. Previewed Tuesday afternoon.

There can be no question of the accuracy and minuteness with which the original drama by Commander Frank Wead has been translated to the celluloids in this exciting film play.

The integrity of the stage story has been scrupulously preserved. In fact, my only complaint against the picture is that it goes too far in the preservation and visualization of the incidents that made the play such a notable contribution to its season.

"Ceiling Zero," in its first form, at least approximated a masterpiece in its creation and maintenance of suspense. The picture on view at the Earle strives so successfully to make visible every possible element of story value that it, conversely and perversely, destroys the suspense in which the play so richly abounded. Nothing is left to the imagination. You see it all. From the standpoint of shrewd dramaturgy that is too much.

O'Brien and Cagney Again.

It has been intimated in this space heretofore that Pat O'Brien and James Cagney, excellent screen playboys that they are, still fall something short of the skill that was devoted to their respective roles by Osgood Perkins and John Littel, on the living stage.

To those who did not see the stage presentation of this vivid drama of commercial aviation, I dare say the picture will appeal as a fine example of realistic filming—complete, compelling and, at times, comic by deliberate intent.

Pat O'Brien is the airport manager who has an old-time army aviator on his hands—the role played originally by Osgood Perkins. Cagney is the wild airman who finds it impossible to buckle down to the strict requirements of systematized commercial flying.

These two are supported, and handsomely, too, by Stuart Erwin, June Travis, Isabel Jewell and the others listed in the small-type paragraph anticipating these remarks.

Miss Jewell Is One.

Miss Travis is an engaging young ingenue whose endowments seems such as to take her far before the cameras, but it is Miss Jewell who delivers the truly dramatic excoriation that lends the climax of "Ceiling Zero" its greatest emotional effect.

Among the lesser of the supporting players, Garry Owen gives an especially able performance as the former flier who crashed a tree and has never since been quite right, mentally. An amazing amount of pathos is wrapped up in this single and distinctly minor role. It is from such "bits" as this that actors have occasionally stepped from obscurity to stardom.

It seems to me, in retrospective contemplation of this filmization of a play that I liked immensely when it first was presented on a Washington stage, that O'Brien and Cagney have carried over into their present parts too much of the spirit and explosiveness of "The Irish In Us." A little more subtlety and a little less yelling would have created a result that would have been a little more superlative than the present tally of their efforts.

The stage portion of the bill is headlined by the Keller Sisters and Lynch, at the Earle this week. This well-known combination, who have starred on stage, screen and over the air, are up to their accustomed form, which is very excellent form, indeed.

Co-starring on the stage is that amiable young roller-skater, Mr. Paul Gerrits, whose skill on rollers is only a fraction of the rich endowment he is able to boast as an entertainer. As a matter of practical fact, it would be my suggestion that he throw away his skates and become, instead of a skater, a raconteur and nimble-tongued comic.

After all, Will Rogers finally abandoned his horse!

Others on the vaudeville portion of the bill include Don Lee and Louise and the Three Emerald Sisters.

The newsreel and C. Frederick Clark's orchestral contributions augment a bill that will be best to those who do not remember too clearly the nerve-wracking suspense of the second act of "Ceiling Zero" as it was presented on the stage.

N. B. B.

Considered One of Season's "Finds"

This charming young woman would be Eleanor Whitney—in fact, is Eleanor Whitney—looked upon by the Paramount studios to which she is under contract as one of the most valuable screen personalities to have bobbed up since goodness knows when. Miss Whitney is supposed to embody a serious threat to the careers of Eleanor Powell, Ginger Rogers and several others engaged in the same line of activity before the cameras and microphones.

RKO-Keith's

"FANG AND CLAW." RKO-Radio picturization of the most recent of the Frank Buck jungle adventures. Narration by Frank Buck; photography by Nicholas Cavaliere and Harry E. Squire. Reviewed Friday morning by Sally Stroud.

The third episode of Frank Buck's bringin'-'em-back-alive expeditions is replete with thrills and excellent photography.

There are close-ups of tigers, crocodiles, odd-billed birds, comical monkeys and pythons. One comes back into a steam-heated existence with a jerk, after trekking fancy with this intrepid adventurer.

The plot, such as there is, concerns itself with Buck's invasion of Asiatic jungles in search of new inhabitants for American zoological parks and museums. Explanations are by Buck; gone for once is the Hollywoodian "sparkling dialogue."

Spoken of as Jungle Enemy Number One, the tiger stalks through the forests with sinuous, sinister stealth. No beast nor fowl but fears him, for all are his prospective prey.

Pythons slither their long, muscular bodies over the ground and along tree branches.

Birds flutter about. Monkeys chatter like debutantes at a tea, Rhinoceri, if you know what I mean, flounder clumsily in streams. Frank Buck makes you see it all—the savagely primitive jungle in its beauty and its terror.

Among the captures he effects are a rare bird of paradise, a carload of monkeys, an armor-plated rhinoceros, a 28-foot python, a 500-pound crocodile, a 10-foot tiger, three rare antelopes and more pythons.

The most thrilling scene would seem to be the one concerning the snaring of the tiger, and his subsequent transportation to Buck's camp. Imprisoned on one side of the cage built to catch him, he is carried miles through the jungle, snarling in impotent fury.

The battle between the female armor-plaed hippotamus and a tiger is brief but stirring. Buck is compelled to perform a bit of surgery on the battle ground, after the tiger is disposed of, for the hippotamus' ear is practically chewed off by the ravenous tiger.

"Hardluck Humphrey," camp pet, is a small honey bear with a proclivity always to get the small end of the stick.

Frank Buck handles all his problems with unstudied ease. But he has been at this business some years now. There is the tying-up of the pythons, the surgeoning on the rhinoceros, the manacling of the tiger, and the lassoing of the fleet, nervous antelope. All of which does not disturb his poise one iota.

Neither did the crowd of autograph-seekers and press representatives ruffle him.

Speech Is Short.

His speech from the stage was short, spoken with clipped emphatic enunciation. Mostly about why the tiger-python battle in "Bring 'em Back Alive" was not fatal to both combatants. Wore a brightly-blue shirt, dark suit, was of about-medium height, easy manner, naturally-poised, younger than you would have imagined. Affable, much the same as you wished he would be . . .

Exceptionally good accompanying short subjects, beginning with views of the new Italian drive, showing use of planes and camel caravans, in an attempt to race the rainy season. Further newsreel shots show Chicago battling fire and ice, a baseball school for youngsters, new vacuum-sealing method for preserving fresh milk for 12 weeks, and the Easter bonnet as it will be presented to the ladies, anon.

There are excerpts from the recent speech of "the Kansas Coolidge," Gov. Langdon; flashes of Borah amidstream, a tirade on conditions and parts of Senator Robinson's recent reply to the gentleman who discarded a derby for tails.

Episode three of Maj. Bowes' Theater of the Air continues with its blend of fairly-good youngsters and amazingly-good photography.

Best of all, of anything on the program, is the Rainbow Parade cartoon, relating the adventures of Molly Moocow and Rip Van Winkle.

Palace

"STRIKE ME PINK." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Clarence Budington Kelland's serial, "Dreamland," adapted by Frank Butler, Walter DeLeon and Francis Martin, starring Eddie Cantor, supported by Ethel Merman, Sally Eilers, Brian Donlevy, Jack LaRue and Harry Parke. Directed by Norman Taurog. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

Eddie Pink is a small and timid soul—one of Clarence Buddington Kelland's favorite little men. He reads a book, graphically entitled "Man or Mouse?" He masters the magnetic eye, the magnetic gesture, the magnetic stance.

He flips a coin—when it comes up man, he's aggressive, with an underlying tremolo. When it comes up mouse, he keeps on flipping.

And then Eddie becomes manager of Dreamland, an amusement park, and has to outwit the bold, bad slot-machine racketeers, and how he does it, is one long laugh!

Film Has Speed.

Two sequences are particularly hilarous—the one in which Gangster Jack LaRue pumps shot after shot into the apparently miraculous Eddie, who simply spits out the bullets, and the poker game, with one visible ghost, two invisible ones, and an invisible pack of cards.

The finish is worth a paragraph all its own. It is just a chase, but what a chase — beautifully timed, surprisefu, practically worthy of hysterics.

Eddie is a very sympathetic, amusing, likable Pink and stays cast, as are Philip Reed, Robert Strange, Joseph Crehan, Frank Reicher and Gordon Elliott.

In the supplementary program, "Double or Nothing" presents Phil Harris and Leah Ray in a clever comedy-musical of double identity and practical joking; "The Phantom Ship," a Looney Tune, has Beans exploring in the polar regions; Dr. Marion Sayle Taylor presents another in the "Voice of Experience" series, and the combined releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels provide fifteen minutes of up-to-the-minute items of real information and diversion.

Metropolitan

"THE MURDER OF DR. HARRIGAN." First National picturization of a story by Mignon G. Eberhart, with screen play by Peter Milne and Sy Bartlett, featuring Ricardo Cortez, Mary Astor and Kay Linaker, with John Eldridge, Joseph Crehan, Frank Reicher, Anita Kerry, Philip Reed, Robert Strange, Mary Treen, Gordon Elliott, Don Barclay, Johnny Arthur and Joan Blair. Directed by Frank McDonald. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Despite the homicidal implications of the title, "The Murder of Dr. Harrigan" is more than a murder-mystery, it is a grand comedy which never takes itself seriously, the while presenting one of the better and more baffling of the current season's crop of teasers.

Murders—two of them—with body shifting, accusations, recriminations, denials, all are present in satisfying proportions and, best of all, studded with so much comedy that, at times, it seems that the tenser moments were inserted into this hospital yarn for "drama relief."

The plot revolves around a secret formula for a new anesthetic and an operation wherein it was supposed to have been used. Both surgeon and patient are found murdered, and then—"to be continued" at the Metropolitan all week!

John Eldridge is the ominous doctor generally disliked, but histrionically fine, since he cleverly contrives to make the audience feel some of the hatred which imbued both his patients and his better-liked personal adherents. To Ricardo Cortez, suave and polished, as the interne who finally puts the police on the right track, be credit for adding a degree of levity to the more dramatic sequences that might otherwise have become too steeped in the aroma of ether and the presence of mean-looking surgical instruments.

The strictly comedy aspects of the play—and they are plenteous—are provided by Don Barclay, as the dipsomaniac who will drink anything, and Johnny Arthur, as the patient seeking, but far from achieving, a rest. Immediate love interest is maintained between Mr. Cortez and Kay Linaker, a personable lass who looks nice in a nurse's uniform. Mary Astor and Anita Kerry also are importantly

Columbia

"A TALE OF TWO CITIES." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Charles Dickens, adapted to the screen by W. P. Lipscomb and S. N. Behrman, starring Ronald Colman, supported by Elizabeth Allen, Edna May Oliver, Reginald Owen, Basil Rathbone, Blanche Yurka, Henry B. Walthall, Donald Woods, Walter Catlett, Fritz Leiber, H. B. Warner, Claude Gillingwater, Isobel Jewell, Billy Bevan, Tully Marshall, E. E. Clive, Ralf Harolde, Robert Warwick, Mitchell Lewis, Lucille LaVerne, Thomas Mitchell and Donald Haines. Directed by Jack Conway. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Superlative in composition and performance and possessing a rare fidelity to the printed page, "A Tale of Two Cities" is once again within the purview of those seeking entertainment out of the ordinary routine of cinematographic offerings.

Not only is this a picture to mark a milestone on cinema progress, but it is one of those rarer offerings which the confirmed addict of the speaking stage can attend, completely losing himself in the tremendous sweep of narrative, the magnificence of performance and the superlative production values.

A glance at the italicized paragraph above is sufficient to indicate the wealth of actorial talent here possessed.

Supplementing the feature are "Winter Magic," featuring seasonable sports around the world; a repeat engagement of "Audioscopiks," that illusory wow, and a release of the Metrotone News.

President Frowns On Blanket Claims

By the Associated Press

Congressional suggestions for a blanket bill covering a large number of private claim measures brought a frown from President Roosevelt yesterday and a hint of a possible veto of such a step.

Asked about such legislation at his press conference, the President reminded questioners that he has vetoed a large number of private claim bills passed individually because the measures eliminated the Government's right of defense before the Court of Claims.

He said if an omnibus bill contained measures barring the Government's right of defense he would be forced to veto such legislation.

Meanwhile, he said, specific bills—including a long-standing private claim bill recently passed to allow payments to a company because of depreciation of the Russian ruble—would be treated on their merits.

Postmaster Named.

The Postoffice Department announced yesterday appointment of William J. Humphrey as acting postmaster at Remington, Va., according to the Associated Press.

Boards Deny Plea by Ickes On Building

Pan American Site Will Stand; Landscaping a Solution.

New Chain Bridge Still Undecided; High Level Span Desired.

Secretary Ickes' complaint that the new Interior Building will suffer esthetically by the location of a Pan American Union annex on the second block south was turned down yesterday by both the Fine Arts and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Meeting jointly, the two bodies overruled Ickes' suggestion that another site be found for the annex, on which work is to be started soon. It will occupy a triangle at Constitution avenue and Eighteenth street.

The building which Ickes fears will be eclipsed by the smaller annex and which is already under construction, is bounded by Eighteenth, Nineteenth, C and E streets northwest.

Daddy Wood, Washington architect, who designed the $10,000,000 structure, represented Ickes at yesterday's closed session. He recommended the annex be built along the C and Eighteenth street sides of the same block on which the Pan American Union Building stands, according to Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the planning commission. The plan received no sympathy from either group.

Landscape Treatment Urged.

Members of both bodies agreed, however, that proper landscaping treatment of the square which will separate the two new structures will enhance visibility of the Interior Building from Constitution avenue. At present, the square is occupied by a temporary building slated for early demolition.

The two commissions failed to arrive at a united stand on proposed replacement of Chain Bridge. Led by Chairman Charles Moore, the arts group held the old span should be replaced only by a monumental high-level bridge, rather than by a less expensive one at low level.

The planners did not rescind their action, taken Thursday, in supporting the District Commissioners' application for $360,000 to demolish the present Chain Bridge and provide a low-level substitute. Although the planning commission agreed with the other group that the monumental type is more desirable, its sentiment was that chances for early replacement are greater if the low-level bridge is agreed upon.

Meeting separately earlier in the day, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission approved the following projects: Establishment of a sanitary board as a means of reducing pollution in the Potomac River basin; location plans for the Government Printing Office annex near North Capitol and H streets northwest, and construction of elevator penthouses on the new annex of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Needed Land Acquired.

Norman C. Brown, land purchasing officer, reported that virtually all land acquisitions necessary for development of Fort Reno Recreation Center, Palisades playground and Pinehurst Parkway playground have been completed. Six parcels in the Fort Reno section will be taken by condemnation, said Brown.

The Fine Arts Commission, at its meeting, approved designs for an extension to the Anacostia High School, a new fire house at Rhode Island avenue and Fourteenth street northeast, and a mess hall for the District workhouse at Occoquan, Va.

Approval, with certain modifications, also was given a full-size model for the statue of Gen Artemas Ward, of Revolutionary War fame, which will be placed in the new circle at Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues. Leonard Crunelle, of Chicago, is the sculptor.

Chief Talks to Detective Head

Airport Road Hazard Cited By Rep. Dingell

Closing of Military Highway Near Flying Field Urged in House.

The hazard existing at Washington Airport by the Military road was again brought to the attention of the House yesterday, this time by Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan, who says he has landed at this field at least 50 times.

Taking the floor out of order during consideration of the Interior Department bill, Dingell warned members that some of their colleagues would be killed or injured at the field some day if something is not done to remove the hazard.

"The Washington Airport could be made one of the finest in the world," he said, "if properly developed. The selfishness and blindness of certain departments and persons, however, may mean the death of some members of Congress who find flying to and from home convenient.

"I haven't any interest in the Washington Airport. I don't even know who owns it. But it does strike me as being one of the most convenient airports to the city it serves in the country. Maybe there are better sites, but there are hardly any more convenient."

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, interrupted to criticize the War Department for not permitting Military road to be closed, and remarked that a District airport bill is now pending in conference.

"We are trying to get something done about it," he added, "but the Senators won't confer."

Dingell said he had no specific proposal in mind, but insisted that "something should be done about it." He said that a personal investigation revealed that if Military road were closed, and the lagoon filled in, runways might be established about 7,700 feet long in one direction and 5,400 feet in another.

Washington Airport is so dangerous for large planes, he said, that 24-passenger cabin planes now being installed on many air lines cannot land in Washington.

"Unless Congress takes a hand, there's going to be a serious accident there some day, and then Congress will have to act."

Last year Chairman McSwain, of the House Military Affairs Committee, introduced a bill to close Military road. The War Department was agreeable, but Arlington County raised serious objections, unless provisions were made by the airport for a substitute road.

Barring of Play 'Private Hicks' Stirs Protests

Rep. Maverick Assails Refusal to Permit Presentation in School.

A stir was created on Capitol Hill yesterday by the action of the Community Center Department Thursday night in banning an offering of the New Theater Group of Washington from its one-act play tourney.

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, Community Center director, predicted the committee in charge would not relax its ruling that the group's play, "Private Hicks," by Albert Maltz, could not be shown.

The drama was barred as likely to result in "controversial and acrimonious discussion" because the committee regarded it as "propaganda," partly due to its selection by the New Theater Magazine as the best one-act anti-war and anti-Fascist play of 1935.

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, voiced sharp protest against the committee's action.

"If a play doesn't cause 'controversial and acriminous discussion,'" he told reporters, "it isn't worth listening to.

"I'm not a reformer, but I never did hear of such a thing in the Capital of the Nation. Use of public school buildings shouldn't be denied to any play unless it is grossly obscene.

"One of the complaints against the play was the language used by a soldier. Now does anybody think a soldier would say, 'Strike me pink! You must be illegitimate!'"

Maverick said the committee members were "very courteous" when he appeared before them with Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York, in behalf of the play.

"But they seemed to be scared to death," he added. "I suppose you can't believe them much because of the uproar about communism. However, if they would take an intelligent attitude Congress would protect them."

Mrs. Peeples declared the action of the committee was not an outgrowth of the controversy over the law dealing with the teaching of communism in the schools.

"The order which caused the committee to reject the play," she explained, "is as old as the use of the schools for events other than classes."

She insisted the committee's action was "not based on personal grounds of any sort."

City Lagging In Sick Care, Christie Says

Upshur Street Hospital Retention Is Urged by Doctor.

Need for More Public Health Nurses Also Emphasized.

Washington is far behind other cities in caring for the sick, especially those unable to pay for physicians' services or hospitalization, Dr. Arthur C. Christie, chairman of the Board of Trade's committee on health, told members of the board of the Council of Social Agencies yesterday.

He urged that every organization of the council petition Congress to restore the health budget for 1937 to the amount approved by the District Commissioners.

Two Pressing Needs.

Dr. Christie referred to two pressing needs here. First was the retention of the Upshur Street Tuberculosis Hospital to give the District more nearly adequate facilities for combating the "white plague." Second was a needed increase in the number of public health nurses, in which he included the members of the instructive visiting nurses in order that indigent sick, leaving hospitals, might receive better care.

The speaker referred to an experiment carried out by Dr. George H. Ruhland, District health officer, in which a small survey of tuberculosis in the high schools was made. This led, he said, to the granting of $95,000 of PWA funds for a survey of the District, which is now being carried on and which has revealed a large number of unsuspected cases of tuberculosis.

Referring to the Upshur street hospital, Dr. Christie said that in all well-regulated cities allowances were made for two hospital beds for tuberculosis for every death that has occurred from this cause during the previous year. As 637 persons died of tuberculosis in Washington last year, this would fix the District needs at 1,274 beds.

Need 250 Nurses.

At the present time there are 200 beds at Gallinger, 300 at the Child's Hospital at Glenndale and 200 at the Upshur street institution. In addition, there is being constructed space for 400 beds at Glenndale, which would give 1,100 beds in all. If the Upshur street hospital is closed, he said, this number would be reduced to 900 beds.

The speaker pointed out the danger facing everyone in Washington with the many active cases of tuberculosis abroad. He said that each case was a potential creator of more cases.

Referring to the nursing situation, Dr. Christie declared that Washington should have 250 public nurses. Instead of this, he said, we have 115, which includes the instructive visiting nurses, the health office having only 54 under its actual control.

He spoke of the situation at Gallinger Hospital, declaring that "an appalling situation" exists there. There should be one nurse to five persons in a well-regulated hospital, he said, while at Gallinger there is one nurse to from 12 to 14 patients. He also pointed out that there are only 23 nurses at the Glenndale hospital for 200 beds.

Kolker, G. W. Gridman, Will Marry Tomorrow

Wedding bells will peal tomorrow afternoon for Sid Kolker, star George Washington University lineman, and his fiancee, Beatrice Shapiro. The two will be married at 5 o'clock at Adas Israel Synagogue, culminating a college romance that blossomed on the downtown school's small campus.

After a brief honeymoon in the South, the couple will return to this city to establish a permanent residence.

P.U.C. Orders Pepco Slash Of $314,000

Return Reduced From 7 to 6.5 Pct.; Rate Base Also Cut.

New Schedules for Year Will Be Considered at Hearing Today.

A slash of $314,000 in consumers' electric power bills was ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission in a mandate to the Potomac Electric Power Company.

The reduction will be accomplished by the Commission order that the initial rate of return allowed the company under the sliding scale plan be reduced from 7 per cent to 6.5 per cent; and that approximately $2,000,000 be slashed from the base on which the rate of return is computed.

People's Counsel William A. Roberts indicated he would insist on further reductions when he filed a memorandum with the Commission reserving right to further argue any point of evidence raised at the hearings. It appeared likely Roberts would insist on a 6 per cent return and further slashes in the rate base.

Hearings Called Today.

Hearings have been called for 10 a. m. today, at which the Commission will hear proposals on the new rate schedules for this year. Allocation of the cuts to be made will be decided after the evidence is heard. Power company officials have been ordered to submit new rate schedules today.

Officials of the Pepco fought against any reducion in he initial rate of return and declared they would not accept a reduction. Roberts argued for a 1 per cent reduction, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Hinman D. Folsom asserted the evidence supported a reduction.

$229,000 More Saved.

Computed on the old basic rate of return and the old rate base, the Commission order has the effect of slicing $229,000 more from consumers' rates than had been calculated by Commssion accountants.

On the old rate of return and the old base rate, Chief Commission Accountant Byars McK. Bachman estimated the cut for this year would have been $84,415. This did not contemplate a slash in the rate of return nor the rate base.

In its letter to Pepco, the Commission ordered it to effect a "substantial decrease in lighting rates to the Federal and District governments" in its new schedules.

Canyon Explorer Describes Thrills

A thrilling voyage of exploration and scientific research down America's "one-way river," the Salmon in Idaho, so swift and full of rapids that upstream boating is impossible and downstream travel dangerous, was described in an illustrated lecture last night before the National Geographic Society by Dr. Maynard Owen Williams at Constitution Hall.

Called the "River of No Return," the Salmon runs westward across Idaho through gorges 6,000 feet deep, with walls higher than those of the Grand Canyon.

Leaders of the expedition were Drs. John C. Reed and Philip J. Shenon, of the United States Geological Survey. Dr. Williams represented the National Geographic Society. Representative D. Worth Clark, of Idaho, was a member of the party of seven.

Carried as fast as 20 miles an hour by the current, the flat-bottomed boat of the expedition had frequent narrow escapes in turbulent rapids. Unique among boats, this craft was managed by two huge sweeps projecting from bow and stern. Built of green wood, it was flexible enough to stand hard usage in the rough water.

Embezzling of $15,000 Is Charged to Cashier

F. C. Thompson, 52, Express Agency Official, Freed on Bond.

A charge of embezzling $15,000 from the Railway Express Agency, was placed against Frederick C. Thompson, 52, of 3618 Eighteenth street northwest, cashier for the express agency here, last night at police headquarters.

Thompson, who has been employed by the agency for 30 years, appeared with his attorney, Joseph D. Kelly. He was booked on the embezzlement charge, and immediately released on $7,500 bond.

Officials of the firm described Thompson as an old and trusted employe, holding a responsible position. They said a note was found Wednesday in a safe in Thompson's office, allegedly written by him, admitting a certain shortage in his accounts, and saying the money was lost in gambling.

Officials declared Thompson left his office Tuesday, saying he was going to see a physician. He did not return the next day, officials said, and the note was found in the safe.

There was no suspicion of any fund shortage until the note was found, it was said. Auditors are now making a complete check of accounts, officials declared.

14 Motorists Lose Permits In Speed Drive

Van Duzer Cites Fewer Crashes, Credits Fear of Drastic Penalties.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced that since the suspension order has been in effect traffic accidents have decreased greatly.

"Something has stopped these smash-ups," he said. "The number of accidents has taken a marked downward trend during the past two weeks. Where crashes numbered in the 50's during a week's period last month, the total dropped to 15 last week."

He attributed the apparent caution in driving to the permit suspension order.

Motorists are more careful. They don't speed so much. They don't want to lose their licenses to drive—even for a short time," he declared.

The permit suspension list yesterday included the following names and offenses:

Ollie R. Absher, 10 H street northeast, 36 miles, 15 days; Ralph L. Allison, 2121 H street northwest, 38 miles, 15 days; Charles B. Austin, 1004 North Daniel street, Clarendon, Va., 40 miles, 30 days; Melvin C. Benson, 334 Raleigh street southeast, 35 miles, 15 days; Fontaine C. Bradley, 1820 Forty-fifth street northwest, 38 miles, 15 days; Marvin S. Cooper, jr., 708 Miller avenue, Clarendon, Va., 38 miles (second offense) 30 days; Francis W. Douglass, 3210 Nineteenth street northwest, 38 miles, 15 days; Elwood C. Francis, 315 E street southeast, 40 miles, 30 days; Fred Green, 1715 Seaton street northwest, 38 miles, 15 days; Frank A. Griffin, 213 H street northwest, 42 miles, 30 days; John W. Hays, 3218 Nineteenth street northwest, 40 miles, 30 days; Calvin B. Herrell, 3615 Fourteenth street northwest, 35 miles, 15 days; John R. Holmes, 1345 Vermont avenue northwest, 40 miles (second offense), 30 days; Ralph Jackson, 1406 Tenth street northwest, 40 miles (second offense), 45 days.

Roberts Urges Rapid Transit Merger Inquiry

P. U. C. Is Requested to Investigate Details of Purchase.

People's Counsel William A. Roberts yesterday requested the Public Utilities Commission to make an inquiry into reported negotiations for the purchase of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. by the Capital Transit Co.

The consolidation of the two companies was authorized by Congress, subject to the approval of the Public Utilities Commission, when the bill was passed which allowed merger of the Capital Traction Co. and the Washington Railway & Electric Co.

Both the Capital Transit Co. and the Washington Rapid Transit Co. are controlled by the North American Co. A previous proposal for the purchase of the W. R. T. Co. by the Capital Transit Co. for a price of $800,000, was disapproved by the commission.

At the same time a request was recommended that the commission make a general investigation of his proposal for elimination of transfers between the lines of the two companies, or to order the Capital Transit to operate its cars and buses over the routes of the smaller company.

House Blocks Rep. Blanton In Red Fight

Amendment to Restrict Communist Ideas Is Held Up.

By James D. Secrest.

Members of the House yesterday maneuvered Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, into such an embarassing position that he failed to offer his threatened amendment to restrict the teaching of communism at Howard University. At the same time they ribbed the American Liberty League.

Even one of his own colleagues, Representative Maverick, joined in the fun that began when Representative Scott (Democrat), California, offered an amendment to the Interior Department appropriations bill prohibiting the teaching of the legislative program of the American Liberty League at Indian schools.

The amendment was copied from the anti-communism rider that Blanton wrote and attached to the District supply bill last year before anyone outside the Senate and House appropriations sub-committee was aware of it.

Amendment Ruled Out.

Scott's amendment was ruled out on a point of order by the presiding chairman of the House, Representative Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina. Blanton was one of those who raised the point of order.

Doughton's ruling clearly showed what would have happened to the rider to the District act had members known in advance that it was to be offered.

"The word 'hereafter' makes it permanent legislation," Doughton said in ruling out the Scott amendment. Permanent legislation on an appropriation bill would not be in order. It not only applies to this, but it applies to subsequent or other legislation."

Scott's amendment read:

"Provided, That hereafter no part of any appropriation for these Indian schools shall be available for the salary of any person teaching or advocating the legislative program of the American Liberty League."

Explaining the amendment, Scott said:

"May I call attention to a provision contained in the District of Columbia appropriation bill for last year, from which I copied this particular amendment? The wording is exactly the same as is in the District of Columbia appropriation bill with this exception:

"The provision in the District of Columbia bill is, 'Provided, That hereafter no part of any appropriation for the public schools shall be available for the payment of the salary of any person teaching or advocating.' Up to that point my amendment is exactly the same. In the District bill it says 'communism,' and my amendment reads the 'American Liberty League.'"

After Representative Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, had raised the point that the amendment was legislation and therefore improper on an appropriation bill, Maverick asked to be heard.

"The Communists are supposed to be trying to overthrow the Government of the United States," he said. "The Liberty League got out a pamphlet in which they compared the President of the United States with King George III in various and sundry ways, which action on the part of King George led to the Revolution.

Called Insidious.

"There were insidious statements in there leading to a revolution in this country. I think that Communists should be treated alike."

After Doughton had ruled out the amendment, Scott resubmitted it without the word "hereafter."

Representative Young (Democrat), Ohio, then interposed:

"Does not the gentleman agree with me that the only difference between the American Liberty League and the Communists is that Communists seek to divide all and the American Liberty League seeks to take all."

As the House broke into an uproar, Scott remarked: "I think the gentleman's point is well taken."

Rattletrap Auto Drivers, Horn-Honkers and Noisy Buses Add to Traffic Confusion, Endanger Lives, Reporter Finds

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, has been cruising in a police car. To vary his activities, he again visited Traffic Court yesterday. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of violations. This is the twenty-second in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Noise—horn honking, sputtering exhausts, clanging bells, the rattle and bang of every-day traffic—has long been considered an important contributing factor to accidents and law infractions.

The motorist who honks and blows his hasty way through tangled downtown traffic is creating hazards—not only for himself but for other drivers as well.

He is trying to save a minute—possibly at the expense of a life. Around him is confusion. The blares and snorts of his horn distract his fellow motorists. They turn their attention from the street ahead to "see what it's all about." And the result is often disaster—accidents, injuries, jams and traffic chaos.

But the horn blower is not alone to blame. He shares responsibility with the man who drives a rattletrap (sometimes they call these automobiles). You can hear him coming blocks away. His engine is roaring until the exhaust sounds like a machine gun. Even the fenders rattle.

Pedestrians and motorists alike look around to see what is happening. And the rattletrap driver continues blithely on his way, never thinking he is a part of Washington's traffic problem.

The subject of noise was brought abruptly to our attention as we sat in Traffic Court listening to the "reasons why" behind violations of traffic regulations yesterday.

A bus driver was on trial for failing to yield the right of way to fire apparatus. It happened several days ago and two firemen were injured in the crash at Twenty-first and P streets northwest.

The bus, according to testimony, cut in front of the speeding fire engine. The collision hurled firemen in all directions. Witnesses said the fire engine siren could be heard for several blocks. The bus driver was asked why he didn't stop. He said:

"I didn't hear the siren—the bus was making too much noise." (He was trusted with the lives of several passengers.)

Bus Drowned Out Siren.

It was further testified that a man on the sidewalk, seeing what was about to happen, ran into the street waving a newspaper, trying vainly to flag the bus.

Occupants of the bus said they couldn't hear the siren either—because of the noise. One passenger said he "thought he heard something."

And the driver, under questioning, still insisted he couldn't hear. He was fined heavily. But was it entirely his fault?

Said Assistant Corporation Counsel W. H. McGrath:

"If a bus is so noisy as to interfere with the hearing of the operator, it should be junked. It is a menace to everyone on the highway."

His sentiments were shared by other court attaches and traffic officials.

The horn-blower is deliberately inviting trouble — and so is the owner of a noisy, mechanically defective vehicle.

Sorry, But Gets Ticket.

After leaving Traffic Court, we picked up Policeman Anthony Richitt and resumed our cruising quest for violations and the "reason why."

It was during the 4:30 rush hour again. He started north on Sixth street northwest (one way during rush periods). A woman driver turned into the street against traffic. We stopped her.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said. "I didn't know this was wrong—why, I've been doing it for weeks. A policeman told me once before not to do it, but I thought it was for just that day."

Then we started across town. On upper Wisconsin avenue northwest, we felt in behind a light delivery truck. For nearly half a mile the driver led us on a merry (?) chase at 40 miles an hour. We checked the speedometer twice to make sure. And when he was stopped, the driver said:

"I was watching my speedometer all the time. I wasn't going over 22 miles an hour."

But he couldn't explain weaving in and out of traffic and failing to give a hand signal when he turned suddenly. He was taken to the Seventh Precinct station and charged.

If YOU were asked this question:

"Do you think it is necessary at this time to balance the budget and start reducing the national debt?"

. . . what would be your answer?

And if your answer is "Yes" . . . how do you believe the job should be accomplished?

By higher taxes? Government economies? A combination of the two?

Vom Rath Sisters Bow To Society at Dinner

By Francesca McKenney.

Last evening lights twinkled from the windows of the 1925 F Street Club, where many members of the debutante circle attended the dinner given by Mrs. Harry Black, of New York, formerly Miss Isabelle May, of Washington, to present to Capital society her twin nieces, Miss Marie Vom Rath and Miss Cecelia Vom Rath, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Willem Vom Rath, who were presented in New York earlier in the season.

Mrs. Black, who is spending some time in Aiken, S. C., was unable to come to Washington to attend the dinner due to illness and the debutantes' mother, Mrs. Vom Rath, acted in her place.

Mrs. vom Rath and her daughters received their guests before the blazing open fire in the drawing room which was attractively decorated in pale green chintz, with comfortable chairs and sofas near the fire, where cocktails were served.

Dinner was served in the large glass-enclosed room back of the drawing room, where the guests were seated at tables of 12. The tables were decorated with large silver bowls massed with spring flowers and silver candlesticks with tall lighted pink tapers.

Mrs. vom Rath wore a dark blue net gown made on simple lines and a corsage of orchids, while Miss Cecilia vom Rath wore a charming gown of pale pink moire and her sister wore a lovely frock of pale blue. Both carried old-fashioned bouquets.

Among the guests were Mlle. Nora van Haersma de With, daughter of the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With; Mlle. Christina Beck-Friis, daughter of the Counselor of the Legation of Sweden and Baroness Beck-Friis; Miss Martha Davidge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davidge, who was presented to society last season; Miss Marguerite Hagner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randall H. Hagner; Miss Emily C. Davis, daughter of Mrs. Archibald Davis; Miss Christine Long, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, and Miss Beatrice Phillips, daughter of the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips.

Among the guests at the table of Mr. and Mrs. vom Rath were former Representative and Mrs. John Philip Hill, the First Secretary of the German Embasy and Frau Scholz, and Mrs. Wallach Merriam.

Later in the evening the guests attended the Friday Evening Supper Club, at the Sulgrave Club, where a large table near the dance floor awaited their arrival.

On Monday the Misses vom Rath will be the guests in whose honor Mrs. Edward Beale McLean will entertain at luncheon in her home, Friendship, on Wisconsin avenue. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman will entertain in their honor at a dinner on Tuesday evening in her home, Uplands, on Foxall road, and on Thursday evening Mrs. Eleanor Patterson will entertain at a dance at her home on Dupont circle.

Miss Jane M. Miller, daughter of Mrs. Miller and the late Mr. J. Norris Miller, of New York, and formerly of Washington, will arrive in the Capital on Wednesday to attend the dance to be given by Mrs. Patterson, and will visit her aunt, Mrs. Charles A. McKenney, in her home on Rhode Island avenue.

Finland Envoy, Mme. Jarnefelt Hosts at Dinner

The Secretary of the Legation of Yugoslavia and Mme. Perazic, entertained at an informal dinner last evening in their home on Massachusetts avenue.

Mrs. John Q. Tilson entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower before taking her guests to Fort Myer. Those in her party were Mrs. Randolph Perkins and her daughter, Miss Cherry Perkins, Mrs. Carlton Wood and daughter, Miss Petrina Wood; Mrs. Gerald D. Linke, Mrs. R. B. Buchanan and Miss Peggy Tilson, daughter of the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Presley entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last evening and remained for the "Movie Night" party.

Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Shirley, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Stoever, Mr. and Mrs. Ellston Ahlberg, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Henderson and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Roberts.

Mrs. Dickson Given Watts entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last evening in honor of Miss Anne Evans, of Riverside, Calif., who has recently come to make her home in Washington.

The other guests were Mrs. Esther Irving, Miss Audrey Alexander, Lieut. Lionel L. Rowe, Lieut. Henry Hederman, Mr. Ralph Roberts and Mr. J. T. Cheney.

Dinner to Honor Andres Segovia

Guitarist to Be Guest of Slavic - American Music Group.

The Slavic-American Society of Music and Fine Arts, Elena de Sayn, president, will entertain Andres Segovia, Spanish master of the guitar, at dinner after his recital at the Shoreham on Tuesday afternoon.

The Slavic-American Society, was founded more than a year ago, and has as one of its purposes the promotion of music and fine arts and the providing of means of contact between representatives of these arts and their patrons.

Last season the society gave several events, among which were the receptions to the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, to the Don Cossacks, to Mme. Goeta Ljunberg of the Metropolitan Opera, and the lecture on the stage arts of Europe by Lasar Galpern, dancer and stage director.

Mr. Segovia and Senora Segovia will be met by the officers of the society and a large group of members and their guests at 8 o'clock.

Party Is Given For Mrs. Menkel

Mr. and Mrs. Kimble Hosts to Wife of Indian Missionary.

The Rev. and Mrs. R. L. Kimble, of Harpur, India, who are spending the winter in Washington, entertained last night at the home of Mrs. Kimble's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Stephan, on Utah avenue, in honor of Mrs. Menkel, wife of Dr. H. C. Menkel, who arrived last Friday from Simla, India, where Dr. Menkel is the medical superintendent of the Simla Sanitarium. Dr. and Mrs. Menkel have been in India more than 35 years as medical missionaries.

The guests included Washingtonians who have spent time in India, most of them as missionaries. They are Mrs. H. H. Votaw, the Rev. and Mrs. Milton E. Kern, the Rev. and Mrs. Robert T. French and their son, Wylie French, the Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Garner, of Mussoori, India, who arrived a few days ago; Mrs. John L. Shaw, Mrs. M. M. Mattison, and her daughters, Miss Lois Mattison and Miss Norma Mattison; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil A. Schutt, Mrs. S. A. Wellman and her daughter, Miss Thelma Wellman; Mrs. A. W. Miss Paula A. Larned Engaged to Mr. Miller

Wedding of West Hartford, Conn., Girl and Son of Interstate Commerce Commissioner to Take Place in Capital in Spring.

Maj. and Mrs. Paul Alexander Larned, of West Hartford, Conn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Paula Alexander Larned, to Mr. Joseph F. Guffey Miller, son of Mr. Carroll Miller, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Mrs. Miller, of Washington and Pittsburgh.

Miss Larned is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Davenport, of Charles Town, W. Va., and of Mrs. Charles W. Larned, of Douglaston, Long Island. On her mother's side Miss Larned comes of English and Virginian ancestry, her grandfather having come from England to Virginia in 1874.

Through her father she is a member of a family closely identified with the United States Military Academy for more than 100 years. Her great-grandfather, the late Gen. E. B. Alexander, of Alexandria, Va., graduated from West Point in 1819. Her grandfather, the late Col. Charles W. Larned was professor of drawing there for 35 years, and her father and uncle, Lieut. Col. W. E. Larned, are graduates of the academy. After finishing school, Miss Larned studied at the Hartford Art School and the Yale School of Fine Arts.

Mr. Miller comes of colonial ancestry on both sides, his father being a descendant of Nicholas Martian, who landed in Virginia in 1619, and is related to the Washington, Lee, Dandridge and other Virginia families. Through his mother he is descended from Col. Edward Cook, an early settler in Pennsylvania, a colonel in the Revolutionary Army and a founder of what is now the University of Pittsburgh. Mr. Miller's mother is Democratic national committeewoman for Pennsylvania, and his uncle, Mr. Joseph F. Guffey, now represents that State in the United States Senate.

Mr. Miller prepared at Shady Side Academy, Pittsburgh, for Yale University, where he was graduated with the class of 1935-E. He was a member of the Senior Society Berzelius and of the national honorary societies, Tau Beta Pi and Sigma Xi, also of the Colony Club. Mr. Miller is now connected with the Milwaukee Chain Belt Co.

The wedding will take place in the late spring in Washington.

Weisz to Open Art Lectures On Wednesday

Senora de Espil to Attend Series Sponsored by Yard School.

Senora de Espil, wife of the Ambassador of Argentina, will be among the outstanding members of Washington's art circles who will attend the series of talks by Eugen Weisz, on "The History of Art," which opens Wednesday night, at 8:30 o'clock in the auditorium of the Washington Club sponsored by the Margaret Yard School of Fine Art.

Mr. Weisz's lectures opening with next week's subject "The Art of Ancient Civilizations" will continue for ten weeks. Other art patrons who are subscribers to the course include the Baroness Korff, Mrs. David N. Wing, Mrs. Gerrit Miller jr., Mrs. John Van Schaick, Mrs. Rutland Beard, Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, Mrs. Frederic E. Farrington, Miss Katharine Scrivener, Miss Margaret Green, Miss Ellen Deer, Miss Beverly Bennett, and Mr. Harold Worthem.

Following the lecture and the showing of a series of invaluable slides, many of which are reproductions of works of the cave dwellers in the Pyrenees, thousands of years ago, Mr. Weisz will answer questions and discuss questions of art with the audiences.

All requests for subscriptions and tickets may be referred to the Corcoran School of Art and to Miss Margaret Yard, director of the Yard School.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, visits Oakington, his old school, to help solve the mystery surrounding the deaths of Robert Marshall and his older brother, Wilbraham. Robert was killed by a falling gas fixture. Wilbraham was found dead at the bottom of the empty swimming tank. A bullet was later found in his brain. Robert Rosevears, headmaster of the school, suggests the death may have been a suicide, made to seem accidental by someone for the sake of the school and the family. But Revel and Guthrie, Scotland Yard detectives, do not accept this theory. They suspect Ellington, cousin of the boys, Robert's housemaster, and heir to the Marshall fortune. They are interested in the fact that Rosevears and Ellington were associated formerly in New Zealand and watch Lambourne, another one of the school masters. Ellington admits that his revolver and cricket bat are missing. Revell and Guthrie discuss the case while waiting for Lambourne to appear for questioning.

Chapter XVIII.

CONVERSATION SOON WILTED under the strain of the detective's irritatingly vague responses, and for the final 10 minutes before the arrival of the second visitor, Revell and Guthrie hardly spoke at all. At last came the sound of slower, quieter footsteps along the outside corridor; the door opened cautiously, and Lambourne entered.

His face was exceedingly pale, Revell noticed; he was obviously very nervous. "You wished to see me?" he began, approaching Guthrie.

"Yes, that's right, Mr. Lambourne. Please sit down. Smoke if you care to."

Lambourne sat in the easy chair facing Guthrie and quakingly lit a cigarette. Guthrie did not speak for at least a minute; then, with a manner very much more direct than he had adopted with Ellington, he plunged straight into the midst of things. "I would like you, Mr. Lambourne," he said quietly, "to tell me exactly where you were and what you were doing between the hours of 8:30 p. m. and 2 a. m. on the night of Wilbraham Marshall's murder."

Lambourne inhaled vigorously before replying, as if struggling for some sort of control over himself. "I think," he answered, at length, "I was in my study most of the time until midnight. It was terribly hot. I knew I should have difficulty in sleeping, so about midnight or so I thought I would go for a walk outside—I have often found that a good way of bringing on drowsiness. I therefore took a stroll and came back. I might have been out perhaps a quarter of an hour altogether. Then I went to bed and fell asleep quite quickly—probably long before 2 a. m."

"You met someone while you were out, didn't you?"

"Oh yes. I thought your inquiry concerned merely my own movements, or I would have mentioned it. I met Ellington, as a matter of fact."

"I see. And that is really all you have to tell me?"

"Yes. I think it is."

"Would you like time to think a little more?"

Guthrie Barks Question.

Lambourne's hands twitched nervously as he jerkily shook his head. Guthrie, nevertheless, allowed considerable time to elapse before he spoke again. At last, and with a sharpness that was rather like the bark of a dog, he said: "I'm sorry you should think it worth while to lie to me, Mr. Lambourne. You admit that you were in the swimming-bath at 10:30?"

"I suppose I must."

"Did you see Marshall?"

"Yes, I saw him."

"Then you were probably the last person to see him alive. Do you know that?"

"Not at all." Lambourne's voice rose to a high-pitched declaration. "On the contrary, I was far more probably the second person—counting the murderer—to see him dead. I went to the swimming-bath because I wanted to swim!"

"What happened when you got there?"

"First of all, I found the door unlocked. That surprised me to begin with. Then I was surprised again to find that the switches wouldn't work. But it wasn't quite dark, so I went through into the main building. I saw then that the bath was empty."

"So what did you do?"

"As I looked down into the empty bath I could see something at one end that showed faintly against the white tiles—a dark heap of something, it looked. I—I climbed down the steps at the end to see what it was. I struck a match—and—and—" He shuddered. "I don't want to have to describe it—don't ask me—please don't ask me! But I'll tell you this much—the blood was still warm"

"Well, go on. What did you do?"

Ellington Is Accused.

Lambourne prepared himself for an obvious ordeal. "I'll tell you," he cried, "though I know you won't believe me. I stood perfectly still by the side of the body for about a quarter of an hour and thought things out. And by that time I had come to the conclusion that seems to be generally accepted now—that the affair wasn't an accident at all, but a murder. More than that, I had made up my mind as to who had done it. And I decided at that same moment to accept the murder's challenge, as it were, and do something that would bring his marvelous and intricate scheme to ruin!"

"Go on," repeated Guthrie impatiently. "Let's have less of what you decided and more of what you did."

"I'm coming to what I did. My aim was to ruin the accident theory, and—more than that—to incriminate the murderer. The murderer I knew to be Ellington. So I left the swimming-bath and walked over to the sports pavilion. In Ellington's locker there was a cricket bat. I took it back with me to the bath; I smeared it in the blood that was lying about; and then I left the bath finally, closing but not locking the door behind me. Last of all I hid the bat in some bushes near the rifle-range, where I knew it would be found."

"You provided us, that is to say, with a faked clue?"

"Yes."

"Did you have any idea that the boy had been shot?"

"Not the slightest. My theory was that he had been killed by bashing on the head—that was why I thought of the cricket bat."

"Did you tell anyone of your suspicions about Ellington?"

"There was—and is still—a young fellow here named Revell who took an interest in the case—I told him. I—I didn't want to be—personally—connected with the affair at all. I—I hate inquests and law courts and all that sort of thing."

Guthrie's cross-examination was becoming keener and more hostile. "Now let's turn to another aspect of the matter. What were your relations with the boy?"

Mrs. Ellington Interrupts.

"With Marshall? I had hardly any at all. I didn't tutor him in anything."

"Wasn't there some kind of trouble at the beginning of this term?"

"It was really quite a trifling matter. The boy had been speaking of me—rather openly—in a way that tended to undermine my discipline."

"You threatened him?"

"I—I may have done. I lost my temper—and—and when I do that I—I—probably—say things I don't mean."

"Now, Mr. Lambourne, will you tell me—"

But just then two things took place almost simultaneously. Lambourne, his nerves strained to breaking point, gave a little cry and plunged forward in a state of collapse, while, at the same moment the door opened and Mrs. Ellington appeared.

She took in the situation with her usual alertness. "Oh, what a shame!" she exclaimed, turning on Guthrie sharply. "You couldn't try any of your games on my husband, so you thought you'd have better luck with a poor fellow who was shell shocked in the war! You coward!"

"I'm sorry you think so hardly of me, Mrs. Ellington," Guthrie said quite calmly, "but I'm afraid it can't be helped. Have you any brandy you could get me for him?"

"If you'll help him along to my house," she answered with cold dignity.

Lambourne had by this time recovered somewhat and, with Guthrie and Mrs. Ellington on either side, he managed to stagger out of the room.

Doctor Treats Broken Ribs Of Umbrellas

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF YOUR UMBRELLA looks like Fido has been playing nip and tuck with it, then here's what to do. Take it to the umbrella doctor who is a positive genius at repair work. Whether the trouble is broken ribs, smashed handle, or torn fabric he'll know what to do. And he'll do it for such a modest sum you'll be overjoyed.

The umbrella doctor has never lost a case in all his 22 professional years. And he has piled up enough experience so that he isn't daunted by any amount of umbrella trouble.

One of his clients not long ago received a very handsome parasol for a birthday present. Her little boy Junior decided one day it would be just the thing for playing soldier. When she recovered it, unfortunately it had gone through several wars. Was she angry! But she had heard of the umbrella hospital so away she went with the decrepit thing. Now it looks as good as the day it was bought.

Snug Vests and Panties.

When cold winds snarl and bite at you and you shiver and shake in your sheer chemise—it serves you right! For it would cost you only a little bit to be provided with some of those warm and cozy soft and snug glovetex vests and panties featured in a downtown store. They're 2½ per cent silk and 10 per cent wool. And are they comfy! They're worth the 29 cents they cost.

Polar Cream for Winter.

IF YOU are an addict to winter sports and love the keen cold air, the sweep of skiis on pine-clad hills, the whirling excitement of skimming over smooth ice, the exciting swoop of flying toboggans, then you'll just naturally love the polar cream made by a well known beauty specialist.

It's a cream concocted especially for lovers of the out-of-doors. A cream made to soften the skin, to prevent it from chapping, peeling and becoming rough and scaly.

It's a soft, lovely green, the color of frozen lake water. It's so creamy that it goes on easily and soothes your skin immediately. You have only to come in out of the cold, leave it on for a half an hour to find that your complexion has all the charm a wintry day can give—and none of the damage.

Natural Colors, Rough Weaves Are New Styles

By Frances Mangum.

FASHION, it would seem, has gone "back to the land." Natural colors, coarse fabrics, rough weaves—these are topnotchers for the spring wardrobe.

'Gang' Activity Of Boys Causes Undue Alarm

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. JONES was worried about Sam. The boy had suddenly become a member of a gang and seemed to have thrown off all allegiance to home. What he did when out with his associates his mother did not know, but she feared the worst. Her picture of their activities included stealing, smoking and drinking. That Sam never got into any real trouble was to her a sign of his ingenuity in evading justice rather than of his innocence.

She envied Mrs. Brown, whose Tommy stayed at home or went for long walks with his chum. He was companionable with his father and mother, too, and deliberately kept himself aloof from the clubs and gangs of his schoolmates.

Reverse Is True.

Had the mothers but known it, Mrs. Brown had far more cause to worry than Mrs. Jones. Sam was doing the normal thing for his age. Tommy was not developing along independent lines, but was staying too long under family domination, and in confiding himself to one friend was losing the contacts and lessons which only a group of one's own kind can teach.

Gang training is valuable in a boy's development, even if the aims of the group are low. If the gang is the ordinary group of boys from healthy environments, their activities are generally harmless enough.

Learns the Rules.

Joining the gang is the boy's first effort to make his own life, and to learn the rules of the game. The rules of the gang are unwritten but strict. They generally include not telling on the other fellow, obedience and taking punishment without squealing. The boy learns team work and nerve. It is an important stage of growth, and every parent should be prepared to face it with equanimity and tolerance.

With Marriageable Women in Washington Far Outnumbering Marriageable Men, New Deal Newcomer Believes Girls Are Justified in Going Alone to Dances.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: In your column of January 22, answering "Miss Ambassador," you expressed surprise that she "as a girl of good family, could even consider going alone to dances." I have always had the impression you are conversant with the condition in Washington which might justify such action, namely, that the number of marriageable young women here far exceed the number of marriageable young men. Since the advent of the New Deal, I understand the difference is even more pronounced.

May I relate my experience in this city? I am doing so in order to convince you that your implication of unladylike conduct is unjustified. First of all, I am a young lady of 24 years. I came to this city from a Midwestern State as part of the New Deal. My parents are looked up to and admired in my home town, and our family considered one of the finest there. I say this without boasting, yet with pride. And I have never done anything to detract from the family reputation.

* * * *

Upon my arrival here I was assigned to a section of my department where my contacts with the opposite sex were practically nil. My superiors were men, but I do not deem it wise to become more than passing friendly with them for the reason that I might be misunderstood. Being a normal and healthy young lady, I naturally desired the companionship of the members of the opposite sex. I joined a church of my denomination, and have enjoyed myself socially as a result of my contacts through that medium. (I am not touching upon the spiritual aspects.) But these friendships and contacts did not come about immediately, of course.

* * * *

I enjoy dancing very much. So I asked one of the young ladies at the office if she knew of some particularly "nice" place where I might dance. She mentioned a few, including among them the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. However, she was going to another dance that evening and invited me to go along with her. Neither "Y" was having a dance that week. May I say, Miss Haworth, that I was very agreeably surprised to find such a well-run dance of a public nature. The elderly people who run this dance school serve in their capacity as chaperons in a very fine manner. In the year that I have been going there, off and on, I have never seen anyone take a drink. A person who is even the least bit "tipsy" is not allowed in the hall.

* * * *

I pride myself on my well-bred manners, but I found that these young people were no less well-bred. The young people, a number of them Government clerks as myself, who come without escorts, come with either or both the desire to enjoy the dancing or the companionship of the opposite sex. (I have, believe it or not, met a second cousin of the Vice President at one of these dances.)

Army Men Are Praised.

I HAVE GONE to many dances with escorts, including those at the above-mentioned hall; I have gone to dances where everybody has had an escort; I have gone to dances where so-called "good society" mingled, where drinking and ribald jokes seemed to hold sway; I have gone to dances where no "Paul Jones" dances were played, and it was necessary to be properly introduced before one could dance with someone else; I have gone to State society dances, and I have gone to the Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. dances; but, I can't say that any of these were any better conducted than the young folk whom I met at this particular dance hall of whom about half came without escorts.

* * * *

I am sure that you realize, Miss Haworth, the need of human companionship, so please don't think unkindly of those young ladies who, due to the unfortunate condition in this city of having three young ladies to one young man (or whatever the proportion is) and who are unable to make social contacts otherwise, have to go to dances without an escort. Personally, I think that more of these kind of dance halls that I mentioned above would be a Godsend. It's too bad the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. do not go into this situation a lot more than they do, as a means of bringing together the younger folk, outside of their own organizations, under a healthy influence. They most certainy don't have enough dances.

* * * *

It's odd how one's opinion changes of things. Prior to coming to Washington my ideas of the Army were quite vague, my only impression having been that the soldiers were, for the most part, a half-baked lot who either didn't know enough to get along as civilians and that they were an ill-mannered lot. Since coming to Washington, I had the pleasure of meeting a soldier through a mutual friend of mine, and through him other soldiers. Imagine my astonishment when I found them just as polite and as gracious as anyone could possibly be; that a number of them are going to the universities in the evening; that still more are high school graduates who have attended Army schools with the intention of making the Army their career. I understand, too, that in order to be promoted in the Army one must usually have better than a grammar school education, and in order to keep their promotions as a result of having taken exams they must continue to take exams to show that they are keeping up with the latest in such things as Coast Artillery, etc. And on such small salaries!

* * * *

It was indeed a revelation to me to find such a beautifully friendly spirit that exists among them. It's too bad that the civilian population (including me, too, I suppose) hasn't been able to grasp the truly fine spirit of helpfulness, friendship and companionship that seems to exist at the present time among the soldiers. Anyway, it's ever so much different from what I had pictured the Army as being. Or, is this a result of an influx of a higher-minded type of young men for the last ten years or so? With best wishes, J. A. S.

Embarrassing Disproportion of Sexes.

DEAR J. A. S.: While yours is an interesting defense of the girl who believes herself justified in borrowing a man's social prerogatives to the extent of going alone to parties, movies and dances, I cannot concede it is altogether logical, even though it may indicate a certain admirable independence of character. I am well aware that women in Washington outnumber men to a degree which works a social hardship on the former and nave made regretful comment on that fact from time to time in this column.

Yet, from my point of view, the very knowledge of this embarrassing disproportion of the sexes in Washington makes it all the more imperative that a gently reared girl of the sensitive, sheltered, demure, truly feminine type avoid insofar as possible those situations and occasions which serve only to emphasize her comparative unpopularity with men. Far better, in my opinion, for a girl to remain away from a dance, a movie or a party than to go and come in the chill shadow cast by men's indifference.

* * * *

It's a wise woman who knows her social weaknesses and strong points, and builds her husband-hunting platform with this knowledge in mind. Unless a girl has mastered the technique of instantly compelling the admiring notice of men; unless she knows how to keep an attenitve man at her elbow; unless she looks unusually well in evening clothes, is a graceful dancer and has a gay, carefree, nonchalant manner, the odds are against her having much fun at a dance. Better for her to seek elsewhere for opportunities of meeting men and engaging their interest. Let her take up riding, golfing, swimming, tennis, skiing, sailing or other daytime activity in the pursuit of which conventional usage does not demand a squire.

* * * *

This is not a purely theoretical suggestion. It was given me by a man of cosmopolitan background (young, handsome and matrimonially eligible, by the way) with particular reference to "Unpopular's" problem. He says many men feel an almost unreasoning attraction toward the outdoor type of girl; that he personally has never fallen in love with a girl unless he has seen her on horseback; that a friend of his always feels instantly attracted to any girl seen maneuvering a sailboat. While convention prohibits a girl's corralling a partner for a dance, nothing can be more pleasantly matter-of-fact than summoning one's tennis playing man friends for a late afternoon game of doubles; an early morning ride and breakfast; a sail and picnic. Shine to advantage on such occasions and dancing or movies should follow as a matter of course. M. H.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE has next to nothing to spend but lots of energy and enthusiasm, so she is all agog to decorate a sunny breakfast room out of her own ingenuity. What, she asks, would we suggest for wall paper, woodwork, curtains, floors, dishes, furniture? Needless to say she will do the work herself and use remnants of furniture that will have to be painted. New purchases will have to be kept down to bedrock!

Educators Prepare A Recipe to Make Marriages Happy

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Six major rules for successful marriage and a happy family life are indicated in final returns released today by the Bernarr MacFadden Foundation in its national fact survey on marriage. These are:

1. Don't live with relatives or in-laws.
2. Have children.
3. Avoid "mixed" religious marriages.
4. Bring up your children with religious training.
5. Serve good meals and maintain an attractive home.
6. Don't wait upon financial security.

The survey has been conducted during the last three months among thousands of married couples in every State of the Union. Replies to a series of 19 key questions were asked in an experience questionnaire prepared by three noted educators, Dr. Lyman Bryson, professor of Adult Education at Columbia University; Dr. Ned H. Dearborn, of New York University, and Mrs. Sidonie M. Gruenberg, of the Child Study Association, New York.

Knows a Bargain When She Sees One

Old-Fashioned 'Hand-Me-Downs' Are Now as Rare as Gas Lamps

THE DESPISED "hand-me down," the ancient, made-over dress our mothers made us wear when we had set our hearts upon a new pink satin, is becoming as rare today as old fashioned gas lamps and real ice men.

Authority for this statement is Miss Katherine Fisher, director of Good Housekeeping Institute. Miss Fisher came to Washington recently to address a convention of the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners.

Her job is judging values. As director of the institute, Miss Fisher appraises almost everything from can openers to refrigerators. She sets upon products the seal of approval which Good Housekeeping magazine requires of manufacturers who advertise in its pages.

Waste of Time.

"The woman who spends her money and energy making over old dresses is wasting her time," said Miss Fisher. "If the dress is an expensive model and the material unusually fine, it is perhaps worthwhile, but women who can afford to buy such dresses usually don't have too refurbish their clothes.

"But generally speaking materials today are not as high quality as they were in the days we had to wear made-overs. Also, dress-making in the home is considerably more expensive than it used to be. By the time a woman has paid a seamstress wages, lunch and carfare, she might just as well have bought a new dress."

If many materials women buy nowadays do not stand up well under wear, Miss Fisher believes that women themselves are partly to blame. She would like to see them launch a campaign to make manufacturers give information about their goods, so that customers will not be fooled on the quality of clothes they buy.

Identification Needed.

"A manufacturer should identify his goods," continued Miss Fisher. "He should label the dress he sells: this will not shrink, or this will not fade, or this should be dry cleaned, not washed.

"The result might mean a slight increase in the price of goods thus labeled, but in my opinion, women are willing to pay a few cents more when so much is at stake."

If materials do not stand up well under dry cleaning, it is because they are of poor quality, according to Miss Fisher. No matter how fragile, whether it be velvet or fine felt, it will clean perfectly if it is of good quality, she said.

Parents Urged To Train Child In Good Habits

Excessive Pampering and Petting Banned; Routine Prevents 'Spoiling.'

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WE all have habits, some of which have possessed us since infancy or early childhood. They become fixed whenever we do the same thing over and over again. Usually the maneuver or movement is one that has been found to bring satisfaction and there are many good as well as bad habits.

Some parents believe that the child's training should not be begun until he is old enough to understand. This is a mistake. If the youngster is to develop a strong, stalwart body and is later to take his place in society as a useful and desirable member, the teaching of good habits should be commenced in infancy.

First of all, regular periods of feeding, sleeping, bathing, etc., must be established. Many a mother will find difficulty in resisting the temptation to rock the baby—in fact, to do anything to stop crying, as she may be exceedingly sensitive to her infant's wails. Crying does not hurt a baby if he is not ill and if food—adequate in amount and quality—has been given at the regular period. Babies are like young animals. They love to be picked up, played with, and petted. After a while they will expect this procedure. If the youngster is taken from the crib every time he cries, instinctively the habit will form and the parents will lose hundreds of hours of needed rest.

Overfeeding Cause of Colic.

Colic, of course, presents a different situation. In many cases it is due to swallowed air with resultant pressure and pain in the abdomen. It is not at all uncommon in the early months of life, particularly in breast-fed babies. Overfeeding is a frequent cause. If colic is persistent, however, the physician can adjust the diet.

If the baby is fed and put to bed at the same time every day he will learn to expect or even anticipate the procedure. Everything possible should be done to avoid breaking the routine. Often a child will object to going to bed. This is usually because interruptions in the regular routine have occurred, each of which the youngster remembers.

Punishment Two-Edged.

Occasionally the youngster will refuse to eat. If he is well, do not coax him, do not show anxiety or excitement, but remove the food quietly after he has had an opportunity to eat it. If the habit persists some other procedure will need to be adopted. It may be advisable to give nothing but water at first. A healthy baby can go 48 hours without food if he has plenty of fluid. In 99 cases out of 100 he will give in and make up for lost time.

Good habits are easy to inculcate, but bad habits seem to grow more readily. They are like weeds that unless eradicated will choke out the flowers.

By Bill McCormick.

Surprise! Surprise!

The finish, which was highly delightful to the attendant 2,000 souls filled with cordial hatred for The Dusek, had the usual element of doubt as Ernie's chassis was half out of the ring when he was given the 1-2-3 count by Referee Jim McNamara.

Doubt or no doubt, Mr. Dusek's 228 pounds were very recumbent and very inert beneath Mr. Cox's 224 pounds—even though some 100 pounds of Mr. Dusek's tonnage, in the form of both his legs, were dangling out of the ring over the middle rope, thereby giving Dusek adherents, if any, basis to dispute the official decision.

Enters Ring Bandaged.

From beginning to end the exhibition was a super-spectacle best described by the movie-magnate term of "Colossal." Ernie entered the ring with his right elbow bandaged by a very rough and ominous-looking hunk of burlap. Without further ado, he proceeded to sandpaper poor Joe's eyes, ears and nose with the rough bandage.

Having in mind a previous encounter with Dusek here, in which it was claimed he was blinded by just such tactics, Cox immediately began appealing piteously to Referee McNamara. McNamara responded with futile gestures and a woebegone expression. Cox finally took matters—or rather the bandage—into his own hands. Pinning Ernie to the floor he stripped the elbow almost bare and Ernie rose stricken and shamefaced, the bandage dangling gruesomely from his arm.

Rough Work Begins.

With that start, it was the work of but a few moments for McNamara to complete the job of disrobing the Dusek elbow and modest Ernie bowed his head in shame—and to launch himself into a flying tackle. From then on, it was every man for himself, including the spectators. The customers tossed peanuts into the ring in a brutal display of mob violence. Ernie gathered a handful and rubbed them into Joe's eyes.

At this point J. Edgar Hoover, head G-man, began coaching Cox and McNamara from a point of vantage at the ringside. The boys fluttered about the ring in a series of flying tackles, several times soaring from the ring either invididually or en masse, sending the ringside customers scurrying to the bleachers. Following a wild and hectic series of these maneuvers, during which first one grappler then the other seemed ready to apply the coup de grace, Ernie missed a beautiful swan dive in the general direction of Cox.

Applies the Finish.

Beyond his opponent and on into the ropes soared Dusek, finally winding up on his back, with his legs over the middle rope and his little tootsies out of the ring. Cox jumped aboard like a conventioneer boarding a boat for Havana—and McNamara did the necessary counting. The time was 36 minutes.

In a semifinal scheduled for 45 minute, Mike Mazurki squashed Tom Jenkins into submission after 17 minutes with a figure 4 scissors. In preliminaries slated to go 30 minutes, Jim Wallis and Jim Coffield worked to a draw, and Jack Hader tossed Silent Abbott.

RALPH BEACH.

Ralph Beach Golf Leader On Coast

AVALON, Catalina Island, Calif., Jan. 31. (AP). — A sparkling hole-in-one supplied the punch today as newcomers to golf fame continued to hold the lead in the $5,000 Santa Catalina Island Open Tournament.

Ray Mangrum, shooting his second ace in a career that began 10 years ago in Pittsburgh, dropped the ball in the cup on the 195-yard eighteenth hole. His tee shot dropped onto the green, bounced twice and rolled a foot into the can.

The shot landed Mangrum in a group of runners-up who finished one stroke back of Ralph Beach, of the Suburban Club, Baltimore, former Middleatlantic champion.

Beach Five Under Par.

Twenty-three players ranged within six strokes of the leader, including such threats as Willie Hunter, Culver City, Calif.; Paul Runyan, White Plains; Horton Smith, Chicago, who counts the 1929 Catalina open one of his first tournament victories; Wiffy Cox, of Bethesda, Md., who added a 65 to 64 of yesterday; Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur, and Fred Morrison, long driver from Pasadena, Calif., who, with Longworth, set the pace yesterday.

Hagen Adds Round of 70.

Walter Hagen, after a sub-par 61 on the first 18 holes, needed 70 today, but was well within the qualifying field.

Fifty professionals with 136 or better and 15 amateurs with 147, will enter tomorrow's 36-hole finals. Leo Wallper, of Washington, was among the qualifiers with his 71—63—134.

Discovery-Azucar Race Listed Today

Los Angeles, Jan. 31 (AP).—Discovery, the American turf's 1935 champion, will get a chance to show what he can do against Azucar, winner of last year's $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. Both were named tonight as certain starters for tomorrow's $5,000 added San Carlos Handicap over a mile and one-sixteenth.

It will be the first appearance of the 1936 season for Discovery. Others in the field are Black Gift, Ariel Cross, Beefsteak, Head Play and Scotch Bun.

Azucar already has one victory to his credit this season, the San Felipe Handicap two weeks ago.

Cavalcade, 3-year-old king of 1934, will not run, it was announced. "Discovery will go to the post a fit animal," said Trainer J. H. Stotler. "We have worked long and carefully with him, and he is ready."

23 Nations File '36 Davis Cup Challenges

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Challenges from 23 nations—one less than last year—were announced today by the British Lawn Tennis Association for the 1936 Davis Cup Tennis competition. The draw will be made Monday.

The United States, Australia and Cuba have challenged in the North American zone, while the other nations will compete on the European continent for the right to qualify for the Interzone final at Wimbledon. The ultimate winner will oppose Great Britain in the challenge round.

The withdrawal of six countries, Italy, Japan, South Africa, New Zealand, Mexico and Estonia, was partly offset by the addition of Greece, Austria, Spain, Switzerland and Argentina.

Other Challenges.

Besides the five newcomers, others who challenged in the European zone were China, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Holland, France, Germany, Ireland, Monaco, Norway, Rumania, Sweden, Belgium, Denmark and Hungary.

Japan withdrew because of financial difficulties; Italy because of economic sanctions imposed in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian conflict, and South Africa and New Zealand because of their remoteness from the competitive zone.

Australia challenged in the American zone for reasons of economy. Should the Aussies meet with defeat in the United States they will be spared the additional expense of journeying to England.

Olympic Row Won by U.S. Sledders

Threaten to Quit Games After Being Banned From Slide.

Americans' Runners Too Sharp, Declare Nazi Officials.

By the Associated Press.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Jan. 31. — What threatened to be the first serious row of the winter Olympics was averted, at least temporarily, today with a half-hearted promise to America's bob-sledders that they will be permitted to use their own sleds both in practice and during the international winter games starting next Thursday.

The American sleds have much sharper runners than Germans really like to see on their course. A near storm over their use arose when the Olympic chute, though still in poor condition from the continuous thaw, was opened shortly after daylight for a few practice runs.

Several competitors from other countries made the descent, but when the Americans, Alan Washbond and Ivan Brown, of Keene Valley, N. Y., brought their sled to the starting line they were denied permission to go.

Demand Show-Down.

The calipers disclosed the runners on the American sleds were only 7 millimeters thick, compared with 12 millimeters or more for those on sleds used by the other nations.

Although no more bobs were allowed to use the run after the Americans had been turned down, J. Hubert Stevens, of Lake Placid, captain of the American squad, invaded Olympic headquarters and demanded a show-down. At one time he threatened to cable America that his entire squad was pulling up stakes and taking the next boat home.

German Olympic officials finally agreed reluctantly that there would be no more practice until the course was frozen so hard it could withstand the razored American blades without damage.

At the same time, Stevens extracted a promise that his men could use their own bobs when the competition begins.

Committee Will Decide.

There's nothing to prevent the committee from changing its mind, however. It's left entirely to their judgment as to whether the runners are "dangerous to the competitors or the course."

With the extra mild weather now in its ninth day, there's no telling when the course will be opened again.

Billy Fiske, who drove the winning American four-man sled at Lake Placid four years ago, has decided not to join his old comrades this time.

From St. Moritz he notified them he would compete if appointed captain with full authority and if he could drive in both the four and two man competitions. His offer was not accepted. Donna Fox, New York undertaker, and Stevens are expected to pilot the four-man bobs and Gilbert Colgate, of New York, and Brown the two-man sleds.

Ewing, Anson, Keeler, Young Are Voted for Hall of Fame

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Unless some ghost nips them at the plate with a miracle throw from centerfield, Buck Ewing, Pop Anson, Willie Keeler and Cy Young will have their unforgettable names inscribed on plaques in baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., birthplace of the national game.

Although lacking a necessary 75 per cent majority of votes cast in the Nation-wide poll to determine which five of the game's pioneers should be forever remembered in the baseball memorial, the great quartet was almost certain to be named. No player received the required majority, however, and another vote will be taken, with the leading 12 from the first ballot as candidates.

The struggle of ballots for the fifth and final place left open is expected to be an exciting one between the other eight—Ed Delehanty, John McGraw, Charles "Old Hoss" Radbourne, Herman Long, Mike Kelly, Amos Rusie, Hugh Jennings and Fred Clarke, in their heyday, an octet that a sharp salesman like Connie Mack would like to have put on the market for Tom Yawkey. Their votes ranged from Delehanty's 21½ to Clarke's 9 in the first poll.

Ewing, who as catcher for the New York Giants rated as the finest of his day, and Anson, Chicago first baseman of great fame, who batted .300 or better 20 seasons, led the first poll with 39½ votes each of the grand total of 75 votes cast for a field of 58 famous old timers. Each needed 58 or 75 per cent.

Keeler, the game's first place hitter, who originated the expression of "I hit 'em where they ain't," ranked third with 33. Keeler's colorful career extended past 1900, so he is sure to receive a large vote among the 10 "moderns," who also will be named to the hall of fame in another and separate vote. Young, only pitcher to win more than 500 major league games, polled 32½ votes. In addition to Delehanty's 21½, the other leaders polled as follows:

McGraw, 17; Radbourne, 16; Long, 15½; Kelly, 15; Rusie, 11½; Jennings, 11, and Clark, 9.

Half votes were counted in cases where a voter named 10 players instead of the requested five. The poll was conducted by Henry P. Edwards, of the American League.

Cunningham, Mangan Renew Feud Tonight

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Led by the great Glenn Cunningham, world's fastest miler, the biggest and most talented track and field gathering of the new Olympic year will perform before a sell-out crowd of 17,000 in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

Cunningham, storm center of the latest controversy in the athletic world, will seek his fourth successive triumph in the Wanamaker mile, feature event of the annual Millrose A. A. games. On past performances, the barrel-chested Kansan not only should do so, but set at rest any idea there was a "fluke" in his disputed victory over Joe Mangan, former Cornell captain, at Boston last Saturday.

Booed After Victory.

Boston fans booed Cunningham when he barely beat Mangan after swerving in front of his rival on the last turn. The suggestion that Glenn used unfair tactics was not upheld by track officials, but Mangan showed resentment. Consequently, something of the air of a "grudge match" surrounds tomorrow's race, although on form Cunningham outclasses all five opponents selected to challenge his supremacy.

Mangan, because of the incentive and his well-known finishing "kick," may furnish the chief opposition. The perennial runner-up, Gene Venzke, of Pennsylvania, will toe the mark, along with three newcomers to this particular event—Archie San Romani, of the Kansas State Teachers' College, of Emporia; Doland Lash, of Indiana, and Norman Bright, of the San Francisco Olympic Club. Lash and Bright have turned in their best work at 2 miles or upward. San Romani is the new national collegiate A. A. mile king and may prove the dark horse of the race.

450 Will Compete.

All told, 450 athletes from 20 States as well as Canada and the District of Columbia, will participate in the Millrose carnival. Forty colleges have entered relay teams or individual specialists. A number of familiar figures, including Percy Beard, Keith Brown and Bill Bonthron, will be missed, but there are crack performers, champions or record breakers in each event.

Indiana's Chuck Hornbostel, long a favorite of Eastern board-track fans, will match strides with Eddie O'Brien, Syracuse's quarter-mile ace, in the Millrose "600." Cornelius Johnson, slender Negro from Los Angeles, and the national high-jump title holder, will try conclusions with Al Threadgill, of Temple, and George Spitz, of New York. Eulace Peacock, Temple Negro and national 100-meter champion, meets Columbia's dusky Ben Johnson and Bobby Packard, Georgia's freshman, in the 60-yard sprint.

Table Tennis Choices Beat D.C. Pair

Schuman, Ratcliffe Bow as 4 Favorites Reach Zone Semifinals.

THE third annual American Zone Table Tennis championships narrowed to semifinal proportions last night in the Tech gymnasium, with the first four seeded players still in the running. Elias Schuman, District champion, and Bob Ratcliffe, Washington's last hopes, were defeated in the round before the quarter-final.

In the women's singles Ruth Hughes Aaron, of New York, defending champion, easily disposed of three opponents to reach the finals along with Anne Sigman, also of New York. Five Washington girls competed, but only Mae Pierce survived her first test defeating Mrs. W. J. Frost, of Far Hills, N. J., 21—17, 21—144.

Gain Doubles Final.

Three of the singles semifinalists also will appear in tonight's doubles final match when Bud Blattner and Dick Tindall meet Sol Schiff and Jimmy Jacobson for the right to represent the United States in the world title event in March in Prague.

Of the favored four who blasted their way to the singles semifinals Jimmy McClure, defending champion, and Dick Tindall, third-seeded player, encountered the sternest opposition. Tindall required five games to defeat Abrams, while McClure beat Silberman, 21—18, 21—17, 21—23, 21—18.

In tonight's men's semifinals, Jimmy McClure, of Indianapolis, crosses paddles with Bud Blattner, of St. Louis, and Sol Schiff, of New York, clashes with Dick Tindall, of St. Louis. Men's singles, women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles titles will be decided to-

Series Title Clinched by Eastern

By John R. Vosburgh.

EASTERN HIGH'S basketball battalion went on another raid yesterday, riddling a valiant Western five with a bewildering bombardment of baskets to bury the champions' most persistent pursuers in the interhigh race, 39 to 22. A small but capacity crowd packed the Central High gym to see the Northeasters win their twenty-first straight inter high victory and clinch their third straight inter high championship.

The lincoln Parkers lunged to the title in true championship style. Western, stubborn runner-up to the champions for two years, displayed anything but second-rate basketball, but when Eastern decided to turn on the heat the Red team became just another stepping-stone in the Blue and White's path to the title.

As if waiting for a good reason to go to town, Eastern didn't begin its real devastating drive to victory until near the close of the second quarter when Western took an 11-10 lead.

Eastern Takes Lead.

Like a mechanical rabbit to a greyhound, the scoreboard apparently spurred Eastern to cut lose. In a little over three minutes the champs had converted the 11-10 Western lead into a 20-11 Eastern lead. The game was all over, but the shootin'—some more Eastern shootin' which resumed in the second half where the 20-11 lead left off.

Buddy (Songbird) Shaner, the crooning center of the champions, had a big day and is reported to have crooned "At the End of a Perfect Day" to intimate friends last night with 11 points and high scoring honors as an excuse. The shuffling Shaner boy dribbled on his own feet once or twice but was dropping in baskets from all angles so neatly that he obscured such faults completely.

But neither Shaner nor Dope Dean, the lank and lackadaisical All-High Eastern guard, who scored 10 points, turned in a better shooting exhibition than did Gerald Burns, shock-haired Western forward. The Western captain accounted for eight points, turning in a floor game and shooting game which brightened the Western side of the picture considerably.

Eastern had a 6-5 lead at the end of the first quarter and took a lead of 10-7 before Harry Wells and Hop Lomax scored twice in a row to give Western an 11-10 lead as the Georgetowners came through with a smooth passing offensive. At this point, however, with about 3½ minutes to go in the half, Bill Buckholtz, Shaner, Dean and Chick Holliday opened up and Eastern led, 20-11, at half time. A 22-13 score early in the second half as the result of a basket by Burns was the closest t' a count became thereafter.

Rivals Are Missing.

Unfortunately, John Marshall High's team of Richmond, Eastern's great rival which had beaten Central on the same floor the previous day, was unable to attend the game. The way Eastern was passing and shooting, like so many mechanical men, the Richmond boys would have gotten an eyeful.

Hockey Star Sought.

3 Big League Stars Spurn Contracts

Bob Johnson Demands $3,000 Raise; Sewell, Bonura Also Balk.

By the Associated Press

TACOMA, Wash, Jan. 31.—Slugging Bob Johnson, who trotted around the home-run circuit 28 times during 1935, returned his unsigned contract today to the Philadelphia Athletics.

The rangy outfielder demanded $12,000, asserting "I'm worth that much as a ball player, regardless of where the club stands in the league." He said his requested salary was an increase of some $3,000 over his 1935 figure. He received the contract, made out at last year's rate, Saturday from Connie Mack.

Cites Mack's Sales.

"When the club was making big money a couple of years ago, I didn't ask for any of it. And now I think I'm worth more than I'm getting, even if the club isn't in the money.

"Mack let a lot of the high-priced boys go this year, and I think he can afford to pay me more nearly what I'm worth. I never have received the kind of money the other home-run leaders get. I think Averill gets at least $12,000, and I know I got more homers last year than he did—and I hit .330."

Johnson admitted he was influenced partly to hold out this year by his success last season. He failed to sign until a week after training camp opened last spring. By so doing he won a $2,500 increase, Johnson claimed.

Two Chisox Holdouts.

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—Chicago's White Sox, deeply engrossed in the problem of finding an outfielder to replace Al Simmons, encountered a pair of holdouts today when First Baseman Zeke Bonura and Catcher Luke Sewell demanded the princely salary of $15,000 each for their 1936 labors.

Second Baseman Jackie Hayes also threatened to hold out, balking at a salary cut, but indications were he would be used in a deal to obtain the needed outfielder.

Bonura, a home-run hitter of note, held out last winter, finally coming to terms several days after the White Sox opened their spring training season. He signed for $9,500, but hit only .295.

Sewell, who made a great comeback last season, came to the team at a low salary price after a disastrous season with Washington in 1934.

Ruark Defeats Crouch To Win City Cue Crown

Gene Ruark won the city three-cushion billiards championship last night by defeating Everett Crouch, 35-31, in the deciding match of a round-robin tournament contested at the Lewis & Krause billiard parlor. Each had a high run of three in 58 innings.

In a preliminary match Warren Hoekie defeated Johnny Dodge, 35-32, in 74 innings.

Werber, Old 'Foe' of Cronin, Calls Him One of League's Best

BILL WERBER fielded close to 1.000 last night as the featured guest of a Personality Development Forum at the Central Y. M. C. A. The thriving third sacker of the Boston Red Sox came through with a smashing hit—a sock at the big league $1,000 fine imposed on players for fighting, but also muffed one question when asked why he "rode Joe Cronin so much when Joe was with the Nats."

"We'll skip that," smiled Werber, who is employed under Manager Cronin, of the Red Sox.

Speaking on "Great Personalities in Baseball and Their Characteristics," Werber had just finished describing Cronin as the ideal example of "determination." Bill went further to say that Cronin "was never a natural athlete," but conceded the fact that he is "one of the greatest shortstops in the American League today."

Admitting this much, Bill branched off on several other topics and players. Somewhat belligerent himself in his brief baseball career, Werber strenuously opposed the fine for fighting.

"It would be a good thing once in a while to turn the boys loose," he explained, but added he did not advocate it as a general practice.

Belligerent Ben Chapman, of the Yankees, was Werber's choice of the perfect example of the "fire" necessary for the success of many a ball player. Chapman's fight with Buddy Myer some time ago, the former Tech High star said, was a good thing for baseball in Washington.

Werber told of the time Chapman punched his wrist in a game in Boston, making him drop the ball when he had Chapman out at third "by a country mile."

"That shows his indomitable fire," Werber explained. "But I had a little fire myself, so I pushed him in the face."

Wes Ferrell, Red Sox pitcher, is one of the greatest personalities in baseball, in Werber's estimation—also one of the most superstitious. Ferrell is an inveterate horoscope reader, Werber explained.

"Why, he saw it in the horoscope that he would be the leading pitcher in the American League last season—and he was. He makes a study of the horoscope, but it is really the psychology which helps him. It works the other way though, too. He thinks the stars are against him on Saturdays. That's why you never see Wes Ferrell pitch on Saturdays. But when the horoscope says he'll have a good day—boy, you can't beat him!"

Somebody asked Werber about the American League pitchers this season. The Red Sox player named them over team by team till he came to Washington.

Bouts Follow Court Battle With Duke

Gebhart, Birmingham Seen as Winners of First 2 Bouts.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

AS confident as a couple of city slickers about to dispose of the Washington Monument to a healthy, but gullible farm boy, the University of Maryland and Virginia boxing teams await tonight's opening gong that will send them into combat at College Park in the feature half of a twin-bill that is one of the season's athletic high spots.

The Old Line courtmen clash with one of Dixie's most powerful quintets, Duke University, in the upper half of the program which is expected to attract a capacity throng of 5,000 fans to Ritchie Coliseum. The opening tap-off is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

Line-up is Same.

Coach Jack Harmony's inability to shift Maryland's lineup for the boxing match, to dispose of Morty Schwartz, willing but impotent lightweight, and thus strengthen the team, leaves the Terrapins no better than an even money shot against the clouting Cavaliers. This line of strategy was frustrated by Webb's inability to shed sufficient avoirdupois to make the 135-pound limit. Mike Lombardo, 165-pounder, and Ivan Hedomatsky, 155-pounder, were to have moved down a notch had Webb made the limit.

On paper the teams figure to battle to another stalemate as they did last year when Maryland invaded the Cavaliers' duelling ground for a thrill-packed punching fiesta. Each team figures to win four bouts tonight and there must be an upset somewhere along the line for either to gain a decision.

With Charley Gebhardt and Tom Birmingham to lead off in the 118-pound and 126-pound divisions the Terrapins are fairly well assured of getting away to a 2-0 lead. Virginia, however, figures to even the match in the next two fights with Marion Brooks in the lightweight division and Maynard Womer in the 145-pound division.

Maryland on Edge.

Ivan Nedomatsky should beat Maynard Harlow in the 155-pound engagement and Mike Lombardo appears capable of staking the Terps to another two-point lead by outpointing Mort Caplin in the 165-pound bout. But here Virginia possibly will be heard from again. The visitors have a tough Dutchman and light-heavyweight in Ray Schmidt, while Fred Cramer should outpoint Johnny Birkland.

Maryland, after two surprising defeats, will climb through the ropes as keen as a freshly honed razor, knowing full well that victory over the conference champions will atone for its losses. Virginia's coach, Johnny LaRowe, is afraid his men are a trifle too confident for their

4-Year-Old Is 8-Length Winner

Sets Own Pace All Way; Jockey Fallon Up; Cheshire Second.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Fla., Jan. 31.—Steel Cutter, running like a gray ghost of a horse, not only outclassed his opposition in today's feature race, but he clipped two-fifths of a second off the track record. In winning by eight lengths, the son of Sir Greysteel, bred on the Labrot Farm, near Annapolis, Md., was clocked in 1:35 1-5 by the official timer, although private clockers credited him with a fifth of a second better.

It was the mile record that fell to Steel Cutter, and the mark had previously been held by Monel, a half brother. This course is used more than any other at this track and has been the target for the Nation's best horses. Although Steel Cutter carried only 93 pounds in the person of Apprentice Jockey W. L. Fallon, the 4-year-old gelding was forced to set his own pace all the way and probably would have hung up even better time had he been pressed.

Pays $8.20 Mutuel.

Those who could draw a hunch from the fact that both the weather here and steel are cold, and those who were in the know cashed an $8.20 mutuel.

Far in the wake of Steel Cutter came Cheshire, from the Greentree Stable to take the place honors from Fidelis, the latter, in the role of favorite. Play Vote and Chance King completed the vest pocket field.

If yesterday was June in January today was January in January. The much-advertised sun was fighting a losing battle with a cold north wind. Men were in overcoats, women in furs and they were unashamed. Members of the Miami Chamber of Commerce strutted in linen suits—with three sweaters beneath.

Increases Advantage.

To return to the feature, there was a brief interval following the start when Steel Cutter, an eligible for the $10,000 Florida Derby, was not in front. However, within a few jumps young Fallon had him in the lead and it was "kitty bar the door" from that point to the finish. The farther the field went, the greater was Steel Cutter's advantage.

Play Vote made a futile attempt to keep up and faded. Fidelis then became leg-weary in the chase. Cheshire closed courageously, but only after Steel Cutter had crossed the line.

The daily double warmed the hearts of the chosen few who teamed the chances of Bee Line and Jubilargo with a $123 mutuel. In the individual betting they were $20 and $7 propositions, repectively.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEE LINE, $20.00, $5.00, $2.70; FLAG OF WAR, $2.50, $2.20; FOREIGN LEGION, $2.20.

BEE LINE, raied in close attendance of the leaders, saved ground until reaching the homestretch, swung to the outside for the closing drive and finishing determinedly under punishment, was up in the concluding strides. FLAG OF WAR went into an easy lead, was steadied in front until challenged, rallied nicely to punishment, but failed to withstand the winner right at the end. FOREIGN LEGION, lacking speed to maintain a forward position, entered contention when reaching the homestretch, but could not threaten the first two.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $800; For 2-year-old fillies, maidens. Went to post at 2:45. Off at 2:50. Start good. (chute) Won driving; place same. Winner, Mrs. William H. Furst's b. f. 121, by High Cloud—Misrepute. Trained by L. T. Neff. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLOUDS, $10.10, $4.60, $4.10; PEGGY PORTER, $4.00, $3.40; HIGH HASTE, $13.00.

CLOUDS, away swiftly and vigorously ridden, raced HIGH HASTE into submission in opening furlong, then holding on strongly, withstood the fast finish of PEGGY PORTER. Latter swerved to the middle of the track shortly after the start, rallied nicely under severe urging and was wearing the winner down rapidly at the close. HIGH HASTE had nice speed while in pursuit of the winner, and held on gamely under a hard drive.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs; claiming. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:29½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, J. U. Gratton's b. or br. g. (4), by Happy Argo—Jubilee. Trained by William Irvine. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:19 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUBILARGO, $7.00, $4.40, $3.90; MASKED REVUE, $21.10, $10.20; PAWN TICKET, $7.60.

JUBILARGO, following close to the leaders, swung to the outside to take command when straightened into the homestretch, was hard ridden thereafter and outstayed MASKED REVUE. Latter bettered his position readily when put to a drive and closed with a belated rush. PAWN TICKET, slower than usual to settle in his stride, finished full of run when coming to the outside nearing the close.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs; allowances. The Biscayne Bay. Purse, $1,100. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 4:00. Off at 4:06½. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner Oddesa Farms' b. g. (3), by Crack Brigade—Silk Stockings. Trained by C. Hyde Smith. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DON CREOLE, $3.70, $3.20, $2.60; REBEKAH, $19.70, $9.00; STE. LOUISE, $3.40.

DON CREOLE, rushed hard in the opening furlong to obtain a contending position, wore REBEKAH down readily when straightened into the homestretch, then came out at will approaching the finish. REBEKAH had high speed to move into the lead, saved ground all the way, but was no match for the winner when collared. STE. LOUISE, kept in the first flight from the beginning, held on willingly during the final issue.

FIFTH RACE—One mile; allowances. The Coral Gables. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:33. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Townsend B. Martin's gr. g. (4), by Sir Greysteel—Marie Rose. Trained by Walter Burrows. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:39 1-5. (New track record.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEEL CUTTER, $8.20, $4.20, $2.30; CHESHIRE, $3.70, $2.20; FIDELIS, $2.30.

STEEL CUTTER, showing extreme speed, sprinted into a commanding lead at once, increased his advantage without effort and held away throughout. CHESHIRE, kept under pressure from the start, worked his way up on the outside, but was held perfectly safe in the closing drive. FIDELIS obtained room on the inside of PLAYVOTE midway of the backstretch, was placed to severe punishment in the last five-sixteenths but was not speed enough.

SIXTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:09½. Start poor. Won driving; place same. Winner, J. Riches' b. g. (3), by American Flag—Muriel Von Derude. Trained by L. Williams. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:39 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG CADET, $23.90, $12.80, $7.90; MISS DIGNITY, $4.90 $4.00; JOAN D., $6.10.

FLAG CADET, lacking speed in the early racing, moved up gamely on the outside when leaving the backstretch, stole through on the inside midway of the homestretch and closing strongly, was up finish at the close. MISS DIGNITY had good speed while setting the pace, met strong opposition from BRIGHT EMERALD and continued gamely under a severe drive. JOAN D., away slowly, ran into contention readily, joined the leaders in the last five-sixteenths and fought it out with excellent courage.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles; claiming. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:41. Off at 5:42½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Mrs. Charles P. Lindner's ch. g. (6), by Single Foot—Enchantment II. Trained by Charles P. Lindner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:58 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LONE HAND, $27.40, $12.80, $4.90; CHATTERPOL, $4.50, $3.00; CAPABLANCA, $3.20.

LONE HAND, going in greatly improved form and closer up than usual in the early running, took command at the stretch turn, then outstayed CHATTERPOL under a hard drive. CHATTERPOL displaced COLORIST to take a slight lead leaving the backstretch, saved ground and held on gamely under punishment. CAPABLANCA, slow to get going, secured racing room on the inside after setting into full stride, and came with good courage.

Tank Stars Vie For Titles at Shoreham

FEATURING the appearance of the national sprint champion, Peter Fick, of the New York Athletic Club, and two junior national championship races, the District A. A. U. will stage its annual midwinter swimming meet on a bigger scale than ever in the Shoreham pool tonight. The first of the nine events on the program will commence at 8 o'clock.

Fick, fastest amateur swimmer in the world over the 100-yard or 100-meter distance, heads a brilliant array of talent coming from as far north as New York and as far south as mid-Virginia.

Late entries from the Dragon Club A. C., of Brooklyn, swelled the number of teams in the junior national men's relay championship last night to ten. The Brooklyn Club, entering two teams, completes a field numbering two teams from the Naval Academy and one each representing the Columbia University Freshmen, the Baltimore Y. M. C. A., the Washington Y. M. C. A., the York Aquatic Club, of York, Pa.; Massanutten Military Academy, of Woodstock, Va., and the Penn A. C., of Philadelphia.

Three-Cornered Battle.

The other junior national event finds Marie Glazier, of the Penn A. C.; Lydia Cort, of the Shoreham, and Margaret Russell, of Baltimore, South Atlantic champion in three events, engaging in a three-cornered battle for the title going to the girl able to paddle fastest 100 yards of breaststroke, 100 of backstroke and 100 free style.

Other events include diving for both men and women, 50-yard and 220-yard free style for women and the 100-yard breaststroke for the fair competitors. Washington's own Margaret Hoffman, comely Government secretary and former Olympic swimmer, will be one of the favored entrants.

Freight Traffic Off for Week, Higher in Year

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended January 25 totaled 584,691 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 29,163 cars or 5.2 per cent above the corresponding week in 1935 and an increase of 21,501 cars or 3.8 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934. Loading of revenue freight for the week of January 25 was a decrease of 26,717 cars or 4.4 per cent below the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 208,026 cars, a decrease of 21,871 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 19,853 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 14,365 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Coal loading amounted to 147,550 cars, an increase of 6,810 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 5,906 cars below the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, an increase of 21,802 cars above the same week in 1934.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 29,140 cars, a decrease of 5,575 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 5,542 cars above the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 2,566 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended January 25, totaled 17,968 cars, an increase of 3,250 cars above the same week in 1935.

Live stock loading amounted to 12,534 cars, a decrease of 1,399 cars below the preceding week, 1,265 cars below the same week in 1935 and 5,987 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, loading of live stock for the week ended January 25, totaled 9,271 cars, a decrease of 1,177 cars below the same week in 1935.

Forest products loading totaled 28,306 cars, a decrease of 74 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 10,377 cars above the same week in 1935, and 7,619 cars above the same week in 1934.

Ore loading amounted to 5,282 cars, a decrease of 784 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,839 cars above the corresponding week in 1935 and 2,090 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Coke loading amounted to 9,672 cars, an increase of 1,011 cars above the preceding week, 854 cars above the same week in 1935 and 1,974 cars above the same week in 1934.

All districts except the Allegheny, reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding week in 1935 all districts except the Allegheny also reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

Government Stock Depresses Cotton

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Nervousness over the disposition of Government financed supplies was considered largely responsible for a sharp break in cotton today. Old crop months broke more than $1.50 per bale with March selling off to 11 and closing at 11.05. The general market closed 5 to 29 points net lower.

French Francs Rise Against U. S. Dollar

New York, Jan. 31, (AP).—The dollar declined in terms of principal European currencies today, reaching the lowest level in relation to the French franc since September, 1934.

In foreign exchange dealings, the French franc rose .01¼ of a cent to 6.69¼ cents, which is virtually at the level at which it would be profitable to ship gold from New York to Paris. Gold has not moved in that direction since September, 1934. French francs closed at 6.69¼ cents.

Advertising Rises 22 Per Cent From Low

The index is a composite of similar indexes for the five principal advertising media — newspapers, magazines, farm papers, outdoor advertising and radio.

1935 Revenues Of C. & P. Tel. Make Big Gain

Operating Income Rises $1,282,820 to $10,066,522.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for last year had a net balance, before dividends, of $1,912,829, which compares with $980,640 in the previous year, an increase of $932,189, or about 95 per cent, according to the company's report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission.

Operating revenues totaled $10,066,522, against $8,783,702; operating expenses amounted to $7,153,484, compared with $6,866,650, while net operating income stood at $2,913,038, against $308,976. Interest deductions required $267,041, against $329,418 last year.

The advances were due to marked improvement in business conditions in this territory. Washington was served by 201,884 telephones on December 31, 1935, as compared with 189,017 on the same date in 1934, a net increase of 12,867 telephones. Phone users in Washington made about 257,700,000 calls in 1935, against 238,600,000 in 1934.

The December report, also filed today, showed a net income of $159,076, a substantial gain over last year. Operating revenues were far ahead of December, 1934, and expenses were kept well in hand, being only moderately larger. Telephone calls in December were about 23,000,000, compared with about 21,000,000 in the same month in 1934.

Stocks Resume Advance Under Cover of Inflationary Outlook; Dollars Weaken.

New York, Jan. 31.—Markets were more impressed with the noise made by the inflationists in Congress than they were with the less strenuous efforts of others to secure regularity in Government finance. As a result the day's trading brought higher prices for common stocks and low-grade bonds, weakness in Government bonds and a further drop in dollars. Turnover in stocks was moderately large at around 3,000,000 shares. May wheat closed a half cent higher at 99⅞ cents a bushel.

Foreign exchanges moved consistently with stocks and bonds in showing more anxiety over inflation than confidence in the passage of new tax bills by Congress, at the President's suggestion, to provide for the new burdens on the budget brought by the AAA bonus and the soldiers' bonus. With or without new taxes, the decision of the Government to carry out its crop-reduction contracts with the farmers and the obligation to find two and a half billions of new money for the former service men, makes balancing of the budget outside the realm of probability for this year at any rate.

May Lose Gold.

That would be disheartening enough for those who hope for the help of stable money as a promoter of business recovery and who also feel discouraged at any fresh threat of heavier taxation. To make matters worse, Representatives who all along have been bent on inflation for its own sake are now going into vigorous training for bouts with those opposed to unsound schemes. They not only oppose higher taxes which they would be obliged to explain to the voters this autumn (an impossible job), but they wish to hasten the collapse of Government credit, for reasons doubtless unknown to themselves.

If the inflationists in Washington will keep the pot boiling until the first of next week, it is highly probable that the desires of France to recover some of the gold lost to this market will be granted. The franc today reached the gold export point against dollars 6.69½ (the exact gold point is 6.6943 cents), but volume of business here was too small to arrange for any immediate transactions. Guilders crossed their gold point with a rush, for the second time within a week, and sterling was buoyant around $5.01. It was a pretty weak day for dollars all around the world.

Speculation continues to go along under its own steam, that is to say, without recourse to the money market. This week a further drop of $30,000,000 in brokers' loans took place, which makes all the more pointless the action of the Federal Reserve Board in lifting margin requirements. Moreover, in the period for securities and business, the creation of potential credit went on at as high a rate as ever. The week's addition to excess bank reserves was $60,000,000, notwithstanding the fact that the gold influx dwindled to add only $7,000,000 to monetary gold stocks.

Credit Expansion.

Demand deposits for member banks in the leading cities also rose $66,000,000, and that is the weak spot for inflation. It is furthermore the position held by the Treasury's spending program, which means upbuilding so long as the unbalanced budget persists. Demand deposits for member banks in 101 cities are now $2,229,000,000 higher than a year ago, and excess bank reserves are well above $3,000,000. For all that excess of credit, total member bank loans to brokers and others on security collateral are virtually unchanged from a year ago and are far below the total of previous recent years. Business loans also are only a few millions greater than a year ago, in spite of the considerable rise in business activity.

That seeming stagnation is what gives rise periodically to the fits of peevishness on the part of Washington politicians when referring to banking activities. They love to take bankers to task for not helping the country by expanding their loans. The banks would be glad enough to do so, but in the nature of things they are blocked. They have been forced into the position of a Treasury financing agency, and for small renumeration. Since the Treasury uses the banks to procure huge sums of money, and then turns over the funds to a myriad of Government lending agencies—farm mortgages, home building, municipal service, public utility construction, railroad improvement—the bank loan item on the books is no longer the proper place to find the actual extension of credit.

What Might Happen.

Credit is being used in a rapidly increasing amount, but the funds are coming by way of the Treasury, which is taking them out of the banks. When the banks expand their loans these days they in reality add to their investments in Government bonds. That item has risen tremendously. Leading city member banks now hold $10,000,000,000 of Government bonds, nearly $1,000,000,000 more than they held a year ago.

Not only does that give some idea of credit extension in the country, but it also holds interesting suggestions of what might happen in case of a severe decline in the Government bond market. A banker here, with $50,000,000 or more of Government bonds under his care, says he knows what he would do; he would cart them all over to the Federal Reserve bank, which he thinks would not care to take them in for less than par. A bad break in Government bonds might well swamp the Federal Reserve system, and be virtually equivalent to forcing the bonds back to the Treasury. That would be incidentally an effective way of putting the brakes on Government waste and extravagance.

Upward and Onward.

Press headline says: "Plan for Big Tax Program Discussed at White House to Offset Budget Losses." Apparently it hasn't occurred to anyone to cut down expenditures, which shows that nothing has changed there since March, 1933.

Steel at 50.

The sight of Steel common selling at 50 was cheering to the general market, although no great spurt followed. This is the third occasion in the last nine months or so when Steel has worked up to that point. The half-way mark on the two occasions has been the signal for a breathing spell in bull operations, and the superstitious may feel somewhat cautious this time on that account. On the other hand, they may regard the third time as the charm. In recent months the price for Steel has followed rather closely the mill operating rate.

Mathematics.

Another press headline says: "Teams of Four Reduced to Six." The writer apparently has been reading Postmaster Farley's post-office surplus accounts.

Support.

Holders of stocks can draw some satisfaction at the month end from the news affecting profits. For the third successive month the call rate has been maintained at ¾ of 1 per cent, and it looks as though it will be a good long time before any pinch will be felt in the money market. Railroad earnings continue to rise, if slowly, and traffic is expanding. Freight loadings for last week dropped a little from the previous week, but they were up about 4 per cent over a year ago. Meanwhile this month company dividend payments continued above the previous year, although the rate of increase was smaller than of recent months.

L. P. Boteler 40 Years With Mutual Fire

Forty years ago today L. Pierce Boteler was elected to a clerkship in the office of the Mutual Fire Insurance Co., a local institution, of which his father, J. Wesley Boteler, was then the secretary. A few months later, upon the death of his father, who served as secretary of the company over 29 years, Mr. Boteler was elected as an assistant secretary and two years later, succeeded Samuel C. Wilson as secretary.

When Mr. Boteler started with the old "Mutual Fire" as the company is termed by its policyholders, the office was located in a stove-heated room on the second floor of the old "Marble Building," at the southwest corner of Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue, now a part of the site of the Department of Justice Building. In 1903 the building was sold to James F. Oyster, afterward one of the Commissioners of the District, who for many years conducted there a butter and egg establishment. The following year the directors purchased a site then considered an "uptown" location and erected a new and the present home for the company at the northwest corner of Thirteenth and H streets northwest.

Company Progress.

Under the guidance of Mr. Boteler, as its executive officer, the Mutual Fire has progressed steadily and is now in its eighty-second year of operation. In his annual report yesterday he said that income was $94,890.04 for last year and assets of $405,515.63. He added:

"Briefly reviewing the operations of 1934, we find the year compares most favorably with other recent years. The present year will find a return to normal charges and income. The investment income was maintained. The fire losses were a little in excess of 1933, both years recording the lowest loss record in 45 years. The assets of the company were substantially increased and made more liquid last year by the purchase of Government securities. The assets, with the surplus over all liabilities, are now greater than any time in the history of the company."

Accountants' Committee.

Members of the District Chapter of Public Accountants appointed to the committee to represent the American Institute of Accountants here are Goodwin P. Graham, chairman; Harold C. Anderson, and John H. Verkouteren. The local group is a sub-committee of the special committee on development of the Institute and forms a connecting link between the national organization and local accountants.

Kelvinator Meetings.

William E. O'Connor, president of Southern Wholesalers and A. A. Brandt, sales manager concluded last night a series of dinner meetings which started last Monday night and were held at the Lee House. At these meetings the Kelvinator line of electric refrigerators and ranges for 1936 for which this company are Washington and Baltimore distributors were shown to the different groups.

Met. Life Assets Over 4 Billions

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 31.—Total assets of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. increased $203,694,360 during 1935 to $4,234,802,511, Frederick H. Ecker, president, disclosed at the company's annual convention of managers. The Metropolitan Life thus retains its ranking as the largest financial institution in the world.

Life insurance in force at the end of the year amountd to $20,269,349,576, a new high, and an increase of $779,544,101 over the total in force at the end of 1934.

The Metropolitan paid more than $500,000,000 to policyholders for death claims, matured endowments, annuities, dividends, disability benefits and cash surrender values, he reported.

The company had 42,165,146 policies in force at the end of the year, including 1,670,041 lives insured by group policies.

Policy loans gained one-half of 1 per cent in 1935, he said, the smallest rise in several years.

Am. Metals Increases Payments on Arrears

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Directors of American Metals Co., Ltd., today increased the payment on preferred dividend arrears to $4 a share. The company, which has interest in non-ferrous metal mining and refining concerns in the United States, Africa, Cuba and Mexico, made two disbursements of $2 each on account of accumulations on the 6 per cent preferred stock in 1935.

The latest dividend is payable March 2 to stockholders of record February 20.

2,743,908 New Autos Sold in U. S. Last Year

Detroit, Jan. 31 (AP).—R. L. Polk & Co. announced today that retail sales of new passenger cars in the United States in 1935 as compiled from official registrations totaled 2,743,908 units. The total has been exceeded only three times in the industry's history—in 1926 when 3,228,401 were sold; in 1928 with 3,139,579, and in 1929 when the total reached 3,880,266.

Crams Reports, Inc., said today production of passenger cars and trucks in the United States and Canada this week declined slightly for the third straight week to a total of 85,790 units, compared to 86,455 units, the revised total for last week.

Kennedy Plan For RadioCorp. Drops 7% Pfd.

Holders to Be Offered Cash Payment of $55 a Share.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 31.—A sweeping plan for the rearrangement of the capital structure and the elimination of $17,263,689 of preferred dividend accumulations was unanimously approved today by directors of Radio Corporation of America.

In expressing their approval of the plan and offering it for stockholders' action at a meeting April 7, directors were following suggestions prepared at their request by Joseph P. Kennedy, former head of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The plan recommended by directors completely eliminates the 495,597 shares of 7 per cent "A" preferred stock now outstanding by paying holders $55 per share in cash.

At the same time it provides for creation of a new $3.50 convertible preferred stock to be given to present holders of the class "B" preferred in partial return for the more than $17,000,000 of unpaid accumulated dividends which have piled up on that issue since 1932.

Owners of the "B" preferred will be asked to turn in each share of their holdings for 1 1-5 shares of the new $3.50 stock and 1 share of common stock to be given them as soon as the plan is operative.

Holders may later increase their interest in the common stock by six additional shares for each share they now own of the present "B" preferred issue.

Conversion Privileges.

This may be accomplished through exercise of the conversion privilege attached to the new $3.50 preferred, each share of which will be convertible for a period of five years into five shares of common stock, or into six shares for each 1 1-5 shares received for one "B" preferred share.

The cash necessary to pay off the present "A" preferred, approximately $27,000,000, will be secured by obtaining bank loans of $10,000,000 at 2½ per cent interest and by utilizing $17,000,000 of RCA treasury cash. Cash and marketable securities remaining in the treasury after the operation is estimated at $16,213,105.

In connection with announcement of the plan, David Sarnoff, president of the corporation, estimated that 1935 net income, to be reported shortly, would amount to $5,100,000, compared with $4,249,884 in 1934. The plan is calculated to effect an annual net saving in charges ahead of the common stock of $2,008,400, assuming that all the preferred "B" stock is turned in under the offer.

The corporation intends to begin dividend payments on the new $3.50 preferred stock, provided stockholders approve the re-capitalization at the April 7 meeting.

$19,500,000 Is Bid For Richfield Oil

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31.—An attempt to sell at public auction the Richfield Oil Co. of California and the Pan-American Petroleum Co., in receivership for six years, failed today. The offer of the only bidder, B. B. Stonecipher, Grand Junction, Colo., oil man, was $19,500,000 for the combined properties—short by more than $10,000,000 of the $29,655,510 minimum price set by a Federal Court. Special Master William A. Bowen, named by Federal District Judge William F. James to conduct the sale, said he would resume the attempt February 29.

Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil man, did not appear at the auction but, after its failure, he confirmed reports he was interested in the big oil properties. He hinted that if he were successful in the purchase he might spend considerable money on the properties here.

U. S. Gold Policy Stirs French Ire

Paris, Jan. 31 (AP).—Certain French financiers today expressed anger and worry over what they said they considered irregular tactics on the part of the United States in supporting the dollar and preventing the exportation of gold to Europe from the United States.

These sources said that France's loss of 1,030,000,000 francs ($87,980,000) in gold during the week ended January 24 was partly, if not entirely, due to the operation of the American monetary equalization fund.

This gold loss, they added, further weakens the average Frenchman's confidence in France's finances and made it impossible for the French Government to borrow the 8,000,000,000 francs (about $535,000,000) it needs at the present time.

Exchange market experts said the United States Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund had bought British sterling at spot prices and gold futures to cover, then had taken the future dollar off the market beginning two weeks ago to prevent the dollar from slipping below the gold point of 14.93 francs.

Cake Sales Gain More Than Bread

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—J. M. Livingston, president of Ward Baking Corporation, reported to stockholders today that bread sales for 1935 increased about 4 per cent, while cake sales were up 19 per cent.

The increases were partly due, he said, to higher selling prices, as the company's production in pounds was slightly less than during the previous year.

Standard Power Output.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Electric output of Standard Gas & Electric Co. for the week ended January 25, 1936, totaled 94,833,518 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 12.4 per cent, compared with the corresponding week last year.
